Robbins, Jones Start Non-Stop Flight to Tokyo

6 COLUMN—FRONT

FLIERS WILL BE REFUELED AT FAIRBANKS, NOME

PLANE LEAVES SEATTLE, WASH., AT 3:59 A. M. PST. TODAY

WEATHER CONDITIONS PERFECT AS FAR AS ALASKA, IS FORECAST

Seattle, Wash., July 8.—(U.P.)—Reginald Robbins and H. S. Jones took off today in their monoplane Fort Worth on a proposed non-stop refueling flight to Tokyo, Japan. The fliers will be refueled at Fairbanks, Alaska, by Nick Greener and Jim Mattern, while they proceed on the flight.

The plane took off at 3:59 A. M. PST. today.

The big plane soared slowly through a light ground fog and headed directly north on the take-off on what the fliers hope will be the first non-stop flight across the Pacific in an airplane.

The trim little yellow and white Lockheed-Vega monoplane Fort Worth was all ready for the fliers when they arrived at the airport at 3:35 A. M. and the take-off was speedy.

They had arisen at 2:45 and eaten a hearty breakfast at the Washington Athletic Club and took with them sandwiches prepared by the chef at the club.

They started warming up the motor of the plane at 3:50 A. M. and eight minutes later lumbered slowly down the runway. The plane was heavy with its load of gasoline which was scheduled to take it 1,600 miles to Fairbanks, and it had reached the end of the runway before the wheels left the ground and it soared into the yellow purple of the dawn.

Both fliers were confident they would accomplish their purpose.

"We will be in Tokyo tomorrow night," Jones said as he stepped into the cockpit.

Weather conditions for the flight were perfect as far as Alaska, and as far as the weather bureau can forecast, the fliers will probably encounter no bad weather all the way to Tokyo, although storm conditions now exist off the northeast coast of Siberia. It was believed, however, that the storm will have moved south and east when the fliers reach there and that they will have gone "around" the disturbance, which was due to reach the North American coast in about 48 hours.

The sky was cloudless and the weather calm when the monoplane disappeared in the northern horizon. It was reported clear all the way to Fairbanks with a slight headwind at lower levels but a good tail wind if the fliers can mount to the 5,000-foot level.

Only a handful of newspapermen, photographers and policemen were at the airport as the Fort Worth sailed into the dawn. All were crowding about the plane and one big cop started "shooing" them back. He put his big hands on Robbins' breast and gave the flier a husky backward shove.

"Get away from that there plane," he shouted at the Texan.

"But, I am going to Japan in that plane. I'm Robbins," the flier answered.

"Oh!" was the only rejoinder.

The pair climbed into the plane, said "Well, so long everybody," and were off.

The plane was loaded with 410 gallons of gasoline, within a few gallons of its capacity. It was so heavy that it started very slowly and Robbins had to "bounce" it three times to get it off the ground, and then it barely cleared some high tension wires far at the end of the airport.

Given good weather and granted that the motor performs perfectly the fliers should reach Fairbanks in from 15 to 18 hours, which will bring them over the interior Alaska city late this evening.

There their refueling plane, piloted by Nick Greener and Jim Mattern, will meet them and give them approximately 100 to 150 gallons of gasoline, depending on their consumption enroute. After the Fairbanks refueling, the plane will head due west to Nome, 520 miles distant, and another six hours or so will be consumed on that leg of the flight.

Vancouver, B. C., July 8. — Flying steadily up the Fraser river basin, the monoplane Fort Worth in which Reg Robbins and Harold Jones are attempting to make a non-stop flight to Japan, passed over Soda Creek, B. C., shortly after 8 A. M. today.

The fliers left Seattle at 3:59 A. M., and continuing their present progress, they should be over Prince George some time between 10 and 11 A. M.

Prince George, B. C., July 8.—The airplane Fort Worth piloted by Reg Robbins and Harold Jones passed over here just before 9:30 A. M. today. The plane went over the west side of the town and headed north. It evidently was making slightly less than 100 miles an hour.

STIMSON'S VISIT TO EUROPE IS VERY IMPORTANT ONE

MAY HAVE REAL BEARING ON WORLD AFFAIRS, STATED

ACCOMPANIED TO NAPLES BY ROBERT J. BENDER OF UNITED PRESS

Editor's Note—Secretary of State Stimson's visit to Europe, although its primary purpose is a holiday, may have an important bearing on world affairs. He was accompanied to Naples aboard the liner Conte Grande by Robert J. Bender, vice-president and general news manager of the United Press, a newspaperman whose contacts with American and foreign affairs have been wide. In the dispatch presented herewith, the probable purpose and effect of Stimson's journey are discussed, and the difficulty of exposing the various steps of his European discussion is explained.

Naples, Italy, July 8.—The next unfinished business before the world is disarmament with debts at least temporarily disposed of.

The solution of the Franco-Italian naval dispute, it is felt, must be found before the opening of the world disarmament conference in February.

For that reason, the visit of Secretary Stimson to Italy takes on a fresh significance.

At the February conference, history may be written in a genuine move to reduce expenditures of the nation on arms, which President Hoover regards as one of the most vital steps toward solution of the world's economic trouble.

While Secretary Stimson does not plan to attend the February conference, newspapers, politicians and laymen foresee the inevitability of his participation in a helpful exchange of views at this critical time, when his arrival is especially propitious in view of the debt moratorium accord just reached in Paris.

The presence of two outstanding members of President Hoover's cabinet in Europe at the same time reflects the tremendous concern of the United States government in world conditions.

Secretary Mellon has just completed the delicate task of putting through the Hoover plan. With Stimson's arrival, the press, public and politicians of Europe wonder what is forthcoming during and after Stimson's conversations with leading government officials here, if anything.

Secretary Stimson has said repeatedly that his mission is not political, but merely an occasion for renewing acquaintances with old friends who occupy posts in Europe similar to his in the United States. He is well acquainted with Dino Grandi, the Italian foreign minister; Aristide Briand and Arthur Henderson, foreign ministers of France and Great Britain, and Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald. He never has met the German ministers, but will do so this visit.

He has said he wishes to talk over common problems with all those friends.

Visualizing Secretary Stimson handling the French and Italian naval accord, which is too hot for Briand to dispose of because of the domestic political situation would, of course, require a stretching of the imagination. Whether it is significant, it should be recalled that, Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius of Germany expect to come to Rome after Secretary Stimson has visited Rome, Paris and Berlin.

It also should be kept in mind that disarmament is a problem complicated by the domestic political situation in all countries involved except Italy where Mussolini is not handicapped by such opposition.

The American congress is about equally divided and Mr. Hoover is facing the presidential election next year.

The French parliament is so constituted as to be subject to an explosion at any time.

The German situation admittedly has been extremely dangerous.

Great Britain's political pulse admittedly has been subject to irregularity.

In view of such a situation, there is little likelihood of any startling news pronouncements of plans or authorized looks behind the scenes, which must remain only pure conjecture before February.

American statesmen have indicated that this may be one of the most critical years world statesmen have had to tread, and hence, they certainly will tread carefully.

SOVIET DONETZ BASIN COAL AREA IS REORGANIZED

DRASTIC PROGRAM IS PUT IN EFFECT BY JOSEF V. STALIN

FIRST MOVE TO MAKE EFFECTIVE NEW "STALIN ECONOMIC ERA"

By EUGENE LYONS
United Press Staff Correspondent

Moscow, July 8.—Immediate reorganization of the important Donetz Basin coal fields along lines encouraging individual effort was ordered by the Soviet authorities today.

A joint order was issued signed by Josef V. Stalin, Premier Viachelas and Serge Ordjonikidze, head of the politbureau, announcing the drastic program.

It was the first move in making effective the new "Stalin economic era," announced by the communist leader recently.

The order specifies that piece work shall be extended and wage scales increased, so that the better qualified miners and other workers will be paid according to their merit and not as they have been, everyone on the same basis regardless of whether their work was good or bad.

"Past months show extremely unsatisfactory fulfillment of coal production in the Donetz Basin," the order said. "The situation may have bad consequences for the entire economy of the Soviet Union.

"If this backwardness is continued, it might strike a blow directly at the realization of our national economic plan."

This direct reference to the possible failure of the five year plan was regarded as of vital significance.

Furthermore, specific crews are to be named to operate machinery in order that responsibility may be fixed.

Individual management of pits at the various mines was stipulated. Twenty-five of the most capable communist leaders will be dispatched to the Donetz Basin to assist in directing the proposed reorganization.

The order was issued jointly by the communist party, the council of ministers, and the supreme economic council.

BANDITS RAID BANK, GET $12,000

START WORK AT HARTFORD CITY, IND., WITH BURST OF GUNFIRE

Hartford, City, Ind., July 8.—(U.P.)—Four bandits raided the Hartford City bank with a burst of gunfire today, seized $12,000 from the cages and escaped.

The shots were aimed at James Cronin, Jr., president of the bank, but missed. Cronin and othre employes then were forced to the rear of the building.

The robbers searched nowhere except in the cages for money, although they could have obtained additional cash from the vault.

NEW DAM AT ALMA, WIS., NEXT STEP IN NINE FOOT CHANNEL

St. Paul, July 8.—(U.P.)—A new $4,000,000 dam at Alma, Wis., will be the next step in the nine foot channel development of the upper Mississippi river, Colonel Wildurr Willing, district engineer, said today.

Plans for the dam are being drawn up and condemnation proceedings will be started immediately to acquire necessary flowage lands. The Alma dam will be the first of several to complete the nine foot channel. It will have one lock.

GENERAL MOTORS JUNE SALE INCREASE

New York, July 8.—(U.P.)—General Motors corporation June sales to dealers (including overseas and Canadian sales) totaled 111,668 cars, against 97,440 cars in June, 1930.

RED CROSS GIVES AID ONLY IN 'CASES OF CATASTROPHE'

Washington, July 8—(U.P.)—Judge John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, said today that his organization would not extend relief to Pennsylvania coal miners because of an established policy to give aid only in "cases of catastrophe." This statement was made in response to a request from Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania who appealed to the Red Cross to extend help.

ACETYLENE TORCH IS IDENTIFIED BY STATE BUREAU

THAT USED IN WRENSHALL ATTEMPTED ROBBERY STOLEN AT FINLAYSON

BURGLARS WORKED FOR HOURS TRYING TO GET PAST THE OUTER VAULT DOOR

Wrenshall, Minn., July 8. — (U.P.) — Operatives of the state bureau of criminal apprehension today identified an acetylene torch used to burn through the heavy outdoor of the vault in the Wrenshall State Bank last night as stolen from a blacksmith shop at Finlayson.

The attempted safe-cracking was apparently the work of two men operatives and Sheriff Selmer Swanson of Carleton agreed. The attempt was discovered today when bank officials found the outer door of the vault burned from its hinges.

The burglars who apparently had worked for several hours last night to get past the outer door had given up their attempt when they still found the inner door resisting their efforts.

The torch was stolen from the blacksmith shop of F. J. Lentz at Finlayson, about 40 miles from here.

Wrenshall is in Carleton county, 20 miles southwest of Duluth.

Drastic Curtailment of Conservation Activities

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 8.—(U.P.)—Drastic curtailment of conservation activities, including the closing of 11 fish hatcheries, cancelation of all rough fish eradication, discharge of 10 wardens was voted by the Wisconsin Conservation commission a a special meeting.

Further steps made necessary by reduction of the commission's budget from $258,000 to $160,000 included the cancelation of all fish rescue work in the Mississippi and a provision for conservation wardens to take a series of two week vacations without pay.

Among the hatcheries to be closed are those located at Birchwood, Spooner, Hayward, Brule, Langlade and Hebron and the pike hatchery at Madison.

9 MEMBERS OF ALLEGED LIQUOR SYNDICATE TAKEN

DISTILLERY CAPABLE OF PRODUCING 250 GALLONS OF ALCOHOL DAILY

SUPPLY SOURCE FOR WESTERN MINNESOTA AND EASTERN SOUTH DAKOTA

Springfield, Minn., July 8.—(U.P.) — Nine members of an alleged bootleg liquor syndicate and a gigantic still were taken to Mankato today after a raid on a farm near here.

The plant, valued at $25,000, was running night and day before the raid, prohibitino agents said. Samuel Miller, Chicago, suspected of being the head of the syndicate, was captured during the raid.

The still, capable of producing 250 gallons of alcohol a day, was believed to have been the supply source for much of western Minnesota and eastern South Dakota.

The raid took place on the farm of Frank Williams, three miles north of here. Others arrested by the agents included Edgar Williams, Gordon Gliesner, Theodore Haas, Edward Anderson, Harry Gohl, Herman Kettner and Louis Nelson.

All were being held at Mankato charged with manufacturing liquor and were awaiting arraignment before United States Commissioner E. Raymond Hughes.

Minimum bond of $10,000 each will be asked by the prohibition department, it was said. Four agents under C. W. Williams, Minnesota dry administrator, raided the plant. They confiscated three automobiles, 60,000 gallons fo corn sugar mash, 12 vats, 300 gallons of low proof and 200 gallans of high proof alcohol, they said.

PRICES MOVE NARROWLY TODAY

DEALINGS FAIRLY ACTIVE ON OPENING OF STOCK EXCHANGE

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press Financial Editor

New York, July 8.—Prices moved narrowly at the opening on the New York stock exchange today, with dealings fairly active. There was an absence of large blocks.

Steel common opened at 98¼ off ⅝ on 2,000 shares and then slipped off to 98 but other leading issues met support. Consolidated Gas rose a point to 95¾ and other utilities were steady to firm. J. I. Case rallied 1⅝ to 80⅝ after its drop of 9¾ points in yesterday's session.

General Motors opened 5,000 shares at 37⅛ up ⅛ and other motor shares held steady. Oils were slightly lower as were rails and steels.

As U. S. Finance Met French

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon is shown at left with Pierre Etienne Flandin, French Minister of Finance, when the two representatives of their governments met for the first time in Paris to discuss the one-year war debt holiday proposed by President Hoover. Latest dispatches indicate that an accord has been reached between the United States and France through negotiations carried on by Secretary Mellon.

Ice Cream Nearly Outlawed at Winona Lake on Sundays

Winona Lake, Wis., July 8.—(U.P.)—Ice cream narrowly escaped being outlawed here on Sundays. Winona Lake directors seriously considered but failed to agree upon a resolution preventing the Sunday sale of ice cream because "it is sinful in the eyes of the Lord to eat it on Sunday."

CHINESE AND KOREAN RICE GROWERS RIOT

SERIOUS SITUATION IS FEARED IN NORTHERN KOREA TODAY

CHINESE FLEE IN TERROR ACROSS BORDER INTO MANCHURIA

Tokio, Japan, July 8.—(U.P.)—Fierce riots between Chinese and Korean rice growers in northern Korea continued today.

A serious situation was feared in some quarters. Heavy police and Japanese troop patrols sought to restore order.

Koreans attacked Chinese residents in northern Korean areas, reports said, during a night of terror. Scores were reported wounded.

Chinese were fleeing in terror across the Korean border into Manchuria, seeking to evade the fanatically inflamed natives who sought to massacre them.

Fights during the night and early today centered in the vicinity of the Yalu river ports.

Approximately 100 Chinese were reported killed in riots which have spread fear and devastated property over a wide area in Korea in the past few days. The fighting at first was blamed on troubles caused by Koreans settling in the Manchurian rice fields, which was resented by the Chinese.

The Chinese press, however, has attacked Japan for a policy allegedly causing the disorders, some Chinese insisting that Japan is attempting to stir up trouble in order to create a pretext for military aggression in Manchuria.

Chinese men and women alike have been attacked and killed, and houses burned. Serious riots at the city of Heijo, north of Seoul, have caused much concern.

THUNDER SHOWERS FOR MINNESOTA

PREDICTED FOR TONIGHT BY UNITED STATES WEATHER BUREAU

St. Paul, Minn., July 8.—(U.P.)—Thunder showers were predicted for Minnesota for tonight by the United States weather bureau.

Thursday will be fair, however, the weather bureau said, and there will not be much change in temperature. Rain fell during the day in several parts of the state.

Cool temperatures were reported from all parts of the northwest. Moorhead had 52 degrees and several points in North Dakota also had 52. Duluth had 54 as did the Twin Cities. South Dakota was uniformly cool.

Judge C. R. Magney Heads Minnesota District Judges

St. Paul, July 8.—(U.P.)—Judge C. R. Magney, Duluth, was elected president of the Minnesota District Judges' association at the final session of the organization last night. Other officers elected included Judge A. B. Gislason, New Ulm, vice president, and Judge Carlton F. McNally, St. Paul, secretary-treasurer.

COL. LINDBERGH HAS TO IDENTIFY HIMSELF AT BANK

Jersey City, N. J., July 8.—(U.P.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, whose picture has been printed many times in nearly every newspaper in the country, had to identify himself before a bank officer recognized him.

A tall, tanned young man with a piece of adhesive plaster over one lip asked John White, branch bank manager, to cash a check. White asked him what he had to identify himself.

"My name is Lindbergh," the man said, producing cards and letters.

While writing out the check the flier explained he cut his lip while diving at a swimming pool Sunday.

WICKERSHAM LAW ENFORCEMENT BODY FILES ITS REPORT

YOUTHFUL OFFENDERS AGAINST SOCIETY'S LAWS ARE SEVERELY PUNISHED

OVERCROWDING AT NEARLY ALL PLACES HOUSING FEDERAL JUVENILE DELINQUENTS

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, July 8.—The Wickersham law enforcement commission in a report made public by President Hoover today, details a startling story of alleged prison tortures which it finds are being inflicted upon youthful offenders against society's laws.

The report is that of the section on child offenders and embodies a detailed study of the subject.

Dungeon cells, bread and water diet, flogging and nerve-wracking punishments are not unusual for prisoners who laugh or have a concealed 2-cent stamp, the report contended. Fatal consequences were reported in one case.

Writing of conditions at Washington state reformatory, the commission investigator, Miriam Van Waters, said:

"Punishment in the dark cells is given for trivial as well as serious offenses; not standing at count, speaking in dining room, laughing in the cell block, making loud popping noises with the mouth, were listed on some of the discipline slips of the federal cases studied.

"It was related to our field worker by one of the reformatory staff that a prisoner was found dead in one of these cells."

Concerning the industrial reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, she charged:

"A few minor offenses noted in the records as punished by from three to six days in the guard house were, possession of a two cent stamp, talking in mess line, concealing an apple in bunk, kicking a refuse can, stealing five eggs from the kitchen."

Shackling of boys with leg irons and misuse of the flogging system was charged against the national training school for boys at Washington last year, but these conditions were said to have been corrected.

Overcrowding was shown at nearly all places where federal juvenile delinquents are placed. At Chillicothe the living quarters were found to be "in poor repair, crowded, unsanitary, and not fireproof." The national training school for girls at Muirkirk, Md., was described as "a dismal restrictive place, reflecting its spirit."

The only place given a clean bill was the Idaho industrial training school, St. Anthony, Idaho. There it was reported a boy arriving from another prison was treated for a leg sore resulting from iron shackles and the confinement of his foot in an Oregon boot.

The Washington state institution received the severest criticism. Twelve correction cells there contain no light or bedding, the report said. Inmates are required to sleep on a plank on the floor. The aim of the medical aid was said to be "to stave off epidemics rather than to treat those who are obviously seriously ill."

One punishment described there is "the drill crew," of which it was stated:

"Those placed on the 'drill crew' are required to keep moving constantly in the yard. They are fed in the dining room twice a day, a slice of bread, a tablespoon of potatoes and water."

As a summation of her opinion the investigator concluded:

"It is a matter of some interpretative comment that the hardest punishments are found usually in the institutions for the reform of young children.

"The best of the institutions house the children in large groups, uses basements for living and play rooms, employs disciplinary measures such as silence at meals, marching, formal routine, and flogging; inmates are frequently at the mercy of boy captains; the worst is not to be distinguished from the prison."

To merit such lives, the federal delinquent youngsters were generally guilty of one of three crimes, violation of the prohibition law, the immigration laws or the motor vehicle theft act, the commission found.

Of the 2,243 boys and girls under eighteen incarcerated during the six months ending December 31, 1930, there were 990 convicted by violating the prohibition law (44.2 per cent of the total), 492 violators of the immigration law and 392 motor theft miscreants.

Eighteen of the prohibition law violators were under 14 and nearly 250 were sixteen or under.

The report did not consider the vast number of state and local delinquents —only those guilty of violating federal laws. Its recommendations therefore were confined to what the federal government can do in the situation. Some of the penal institutions to which reference was made are state institutions where the federal government merely houses its delinquents, so its recommendation was only that where cases of cruelty are shown the prisoner should be removed to another institution.

Changes recommended are legal and technical. The major recommendation favored federal legislation to recognize the status of juvenile delin-

START WORK AT HARTFORD CITY, IND., WITH BURST OF GUNFIRE

Hartford, City, Ind., July 8.—(U.P.)—Four bandits raided the Hartford City bank with a burst of gunfire today, seized $12,000 from the cages and escaped.

The shots were aimed at James Cronin, Jr., president of the bank, but missed. Cronin and othre employes then were forced to the rear of the building.

The robbers searched nowhere except in the cages for money, although they could have obtained additional cash from the vault.

NEW DAM AT ALMA, WIS., NEXT STEP IN NINE FOOT CHANNEL

St. Paul, July 8.—(U.P.)—A new $4,000,000 dam at Alma, Wis., will be the next step in the nine foot channel development of the upper Mississippi river, Colonel Wildurr Willing, district engineer, said today.

Plans for the dam are being drawn up and condemnation proceedings will be started immediately to acquire necessary flowage lands. The Alma dam will be the first of several to complete the nine foot channel. It will have one lock.

GENERAL MOTORS JUNE SALE INCREASE

New York, July 8.—(U.P.)—General Motors corporation June sales to dealers (including overseas and Canadian sales) totaled 111,668 cars, against 97,440 cars in June, 1930.

RED CROSS GIVES AID ONLY IN 'CASES OF CATASTROPHE'

Washington, July 8—(U.P.)—Judge John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, said today that his organization would not extend relief to Pennsylvania coal miners because of an established policy to give aid only in "cases of catastrophe." This statement was made in response to a request from Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania who appealed to the Red Cross to extend help.

ACETYLENE TORCH IS IDENTIFIED BY STATE BUREAU

THAT USED IN WRENSHALL ATTEMPTED ROBBERY STOLEN AT FINLAYSON

BURGLARS WORKED FOR HOURS TRYING TO GET PAST THE OUTER VAULT DOOR

Wrenshall, Minn., July 8. — (U.P.) — Operatives of the state bureau of criminal apprehension today identified an acetylene torch used to burn through the heavy outdoor of the vault in the Wrenshall State Bank last night as stolen from a blacksmith shop at Finlayson.

The attempted safe-cracking was apparently the work of two men operatives and Sheriff Selmer Swanson of Carleton agreed. The attempt was discovered today when bank officials found the outer door of the vault burned from its hinges.

The burglars who apparently had worked for several hours last night to get past the outer door had given up their attempt when they still found the inner door resisting their efforts.

The torch was stolen from the blacksmith shop of F. J. Lentz at Finlayson, about 40 miles from here.

Wrenshall is in Carleton county, 20 miles southwest of Duluth.

Drastic Curtailment of Conservation Activities

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 8.—(U.P.)—Drastic curtailment of conservation activities, including the closing of 11 fish hatcheries, cancelation of all rough fish eradication, discharge of 10 wardens was voted by the Wisconsin Conservation commission a a special meeting.

Further steps made necessary by reduction of the commission's budget from $258,000 to $160,000 included the cancelation of all fish rescue work in the Mississippi and a provision for conservation wardens to take a series of two week vacations without pay.

Among the hatcheries to be closed are those located at Birchwood, Spooner, Hayward, Brule, Langlade and Hebron and the pike hatchery at Madison.

9 MEMBERS OF ALLEGED LIQUOR SYNDICATE TAKEN

DISTILLERY CAPABLE OF PRODUCING 250 GALLONS OF ALCOHOL DAILY

SUPPLY SOURCE FOR WESTERN MINNESOTA AND EASTERN SOUTH DAKOTA

Springfield, Minn., July 8.—(U.P.) — Nine members of an alleged bootleg liquor syndicate and a gigantic still were taken to Mankato today after a raid on a farm near here.

The plant, valued at $25,000, was running night and day before the raid, prohibitino agents said. Samuel Miller, Chicago, suspected of being the head of the syndicate, was captured during the raid.

The still, capable of producing 250 gallons of alcohol a day, was believed to have been the supply source for much of western Minnesota and eastern South Dakota.

The raid took place on the farm of Frank Williams, three miles north of here. Others arrested by the agents included Edgar Williams, Gordon Gliesner, Theodore Haas, Edward Anderson, Harry Gohl, Herman Kettner and Louis Nelson.

All were being held at Mankato charged with manufacturing liquor and were awaiting arraignment before United States Commissioner E. Raymond Hughes.

Minimum bond of $10,000 each will be asked by the prohibition department, it was said. Four agents under C. W. Williams, Minnesota dry administrator, raided the plant. They confiscated three automobiles, 60,000 gallons fo corn sugar mash, 12 vats, 300 gallons of low proof and 200 gallons of high proof alcohol, they said.

PRICES MOVE NARROWLY TODAY

DEALINGS FAIRLY ACTIVE ON OPENING OF STOCK EXCHANGE

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press Financial Editor

New York, July 8.—Prices moved narrowly at the opening on the New York stock exchange today, with dealings fairly active. There was an absence of large blocks.

Steel common opened at 98¼ off ⅝ on 2,000 shares and then slipped off to 98 but other leading issues met support. Consolidated Gas rose a point to 95⅝ and other utilities were steady to firm. J. I. Case rallied 1⅝ to 80¾ after its drop of 9¾ points in yesterday's session.

General Motors opened 5,000 shares at 37⅛ up ⅛ and other motor shares held steady. Oils were slightly lower as were rails and steels.

As U. S. Finance Met French

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon is shown at left with Pierre Etienne Flandin, French Minister of Finance, when the two representatives of their governments met for the first time in Paris to discuss the one-year war debt holiday proposed by President Hoover. Latest dispatches indicate that an accord has been reached between the United States and France through negotiations carried on by Secretary Mellon.

Ice Cream Nearly Outlawed at Winona Lake on Sundays

Winona Lake, Wis., July 8.—(U.P.)—Ice cream narrowly escaped being outlawed here on Sundays. Winona Lake directors seriously considered but failed to agree upon a resolution preventing the Sunday sale of ice cream because "it is sinful in the eyes of the Lord to eat it on Sunday."

CHINESE AND KOREAN RICE GROWERS RIOT

SERIOUS SITUATION IS FEARED IN NORTHERN KOREA TODAY

CHINESE FLEE IN TERROR ACROSS BORDER INTO MANCHURIA

Tokio, Japan, July 8.—(U.P.)—Fierce riots between Chinese and Korean rice growers in northern Korea continued today.

A serious situation was feared in some quarters. Heavy police and Japanese troop patrols sought to restore order.

Koreans attacked Chinese residents in northern Korean areas, reports said, during a night of terror. Scores were reported wounded.

Chinese were fleeing in terror across the Korean border into Manchuria, seeking to evade the fanatically inflamed natives who sought to massacre them.

Fights during the night and early today centered in the vicinity of the Yalu river ports.

Approximately 100 Chinese were reported killed in riots which have spread fear and devastated property over a wide area in Korea in the past few days. The fighting at first was blamed on troubles caused by Koreans settling in the Manchurian rice fields, which was resented by the Chinese.

The Chinese press, however, has attacked Japan for a policy allegedly causing the disorders, some Chinese insisting that Japan is attempting to stir up trouble in order to create a pretext for military aggression in Manchuria.

Chinese men and women alike have been attacked and killed, and houses burned. Serious riots at the city of Heijo, north of Seoul, have caused much concern.

THUNDER SHOWERS FOR MINNESOTA

PREDICTED FOR TONIGHT BY UNITED STATES WEATHER BUREAU

St. Paul, Minn., July 8.—(U.P.)—Thunder showers were predicted for Minnesota for tonight by the United States weather bureau.

Thursday will be fair, however, the weather bureau said, and there will not be much change in temperature. Rain fell during the day in several parts of the state.

Cool temperatures were reported from all parts of the northwest. Moorhead had 52 degrees and several points in North Dakota also had 52. Duluth had 54 as did the Twin Cities. South Dakota was uniformly cool.

Judge C. R. Magney Heads Minnesota District Judges

St. Paul, July 8.—(U.P.)—Judge C. R. Magney, Duluth, was elected president of the Minnesota District Judges' association at the final session of the organization last night. Other officers elected included Judge A. B. Gislason, New Ulm, vice president, and Judge Carlton F. McNally, St. Paul, secretary-treasurer.

COL. LINDBERGH HAS TO IDENTIFY HIMSELF AT BANK

Jersey City, N. J., July 8.—(U.P.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, whose picture has been printed many times in nearly every newspaper in the country, had to identify himself before a bank officer recognized him.

A tall, tanned young man with a piece of adhesive plaster over one lip asked John White, branch bank manager, to cash a check. White asked him what he had to identify himself.

"My name is Lindbergh," the man said, producing cards and letters.

While writing out the check the flier explained he cut his lip while diving at a swimming pool Sunday.

WICKERSHAM LAW ENFORCEMENT BODY FILES ITS REPORT

YOUTHFUL OFFENDERS AGAINST SOCIETY'S LAWS ARE SEVERELY PUNISHED

OVERCROWDING AT NEARLY ALL PLACES HOUSING FEDERAL JUVENILE DELINQUENTS

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, July 8.—The Wickersham law enforcement commission in a report made public by President Hoover today, details a startling story of alleged prison tortures which it finds are being inflicted upon youthful offenders against society's laws.

The report is that of the section on child offenders and embodies a detailed study of the subject.

Dungeon cells, bread and water diet, flogging and nerve-wracking punishments are not unusual for prisoners who laugh or have a concealed 2-cent stamp, the report contended. Fatal consequences were reported in one case.

Writing of conditions at Washington state reformatory, the commission investigator, Miriam Van Waters, said: "Punishment in the dark cells is given for trivial as well as serious offenses; not standing at count, speaking in dining room, laughing in the cell block, making loud popping noises with the mouth, were listed on some of the discipline slips of the federal cases studied.

"It was related to our field worker by one of the reformatory staff that a prisoner was found dead in one of these cells."

Concerning the industrial reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, she charged: "A few minor offenses noted in the records as punished by from three to six days in the guard house were, possession of a two cent stamp, talking in mess line, concealing an apple in bunk, kicking a refuse can, stealing five eggs from the kitchen."

Shackling of boys with leg irons and misuse of the flogging system was charged against the national training school for boys at Washington last year, but these conditions were said to have been corrected.

Overcrowding was shown at nearly all places where federal juvenile delinquents are placed. At Chillicothe the living quarters were found to be "in poor repair, crowded, unsanitary, and not fireproof." The national training school for girls at Muirkirk, Md., was described as "a dismal restrictive place, reflecting its spirit."

The only place given a clean bill was the Idaho industrial training school, St. Anthony, Idaho. There it was reported a boy arriving from another prison was treated for a leg sore resulting from iron shackles and the confinement of his foot in an Oregon boot.

The Washington state institution received the severest criticism. Twelve correction cells there contain no light or bedding, the report said. Inmates are required to sleep on a plank on the floor. The aim of the medical aid was said to be "to stave off epidemics rather than to treat those who are obviously seriously ill."

One punishment described there is "the drill crew," of which it was stated:

"Those placed on the 'drill crew' are required to keep moving constantly in the yard. They are fed in the dining room twice a day, a slice of bread, a tablespoon of potatoes and water."

As a summation of her opinion the investigator concluded:

"It is a matter of some interpretative comment that the hardest punishments are found usually in the institutions for the reform of young children.

"The best of the institutions house the children in large groups, uses basements for living and play rooms, employs disciplinary measures such as silence at meals, marching, formal routine, and flogging; inmates are frequently at the mercy of boy captains; the worst is not to be distinguished from the prison."

To merit such lives, the federal delinquent youngsters were generally guilty of one of three crimes, violation of the prohibition law, the immigration laws or the motor vehicle theft act, the commission found.

Of the 2,243 boys and girls under eighteen incarcerated during the six months ending December 31, 1930, there were 990 convicted by violating the prohibition law (44.2 per cent of the total), 492 violators of the immigration law and 392 motor theft miscreants.

Eighteen of the prohibition law violators were under 14 and nearly 250 were sixteen or under.

The report did not consider the vast number of state and local delinquents —only those guilty of violating federal laws. Its recommendations therefore were confined to what the federal government can do in the situation. Some of the penal institutions to which reference was made are state institutions where the federal government merely houses its delinquents, so its recommendation was only that where cases of cruelty are shown the prisoner should be removed to another institution.

Changes recommended are legal and technical. The major recommendation favored federal legislation to recognize the status of juvenile delin-

PILOT INJURED AS PLANE CRASHES AGAINST HILL

Martins Ferry, O., July 8.—(U.P.)—Charles Sugg, pilot in the national air tour, was injured seriously near here today when his airplane crashed against the side of a hill.

Sugg was taken to Martin's Ferry hospital where it was said his skull may have been fractured.

The flier landed at Martin's Ferry and took off from the lea of a high hill. He failed to gain sufficient altitude to clear the summit.

Farmers rushed to the badly wrecked plane in which Sugg was pinned. Broken parts of the craft were chopped away with axes before the flier could be removed.

The tour, composed of 30 airplanes, landed here from Wheeling, W. Va., en route to Columbus, O., for a noon stop.

NATIONS UNITING TO OUTLAW WAR

London, July 8.—(U.P.)—Out of 66 nations invited by the United States to adhere to the Kellogg treaty for the renunciation of war only six have failed so far to sign, Arthur Henderson, foreign secretary, told a questioner in the house of commons today.

The six who have not acted are Latin-American states—Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador, San Salvador and Uruguay.

Three Railways to Substitute Custodians for Agents at 5 Stations

St. Paul, July 8.—(U.P.)—Three railroads were granted permission today to substitute custodians for agents at five stations by the state railroad and warehouse commission.

Another road was granted permission to abandon its station. The Great Northern will move out of the station at Brevator in St. Louis county. Total business of the station during 1930 was $17.97, the commission learned.

The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad was permitted to substitute custodian service at Langdon, in Washington county; Minneiska in Wabasha county and Eggleston in Goodhue county.

The Soo Line will substitute a custodian at Almora in Otter Tail county and the Northern Pacific at Cushing in Morrison county.

3 POISON LIQUOR VICTIMS DIE IN BROCKTON, MASS.

Brockton, Mass., July 8.—(U.P.)—The deaths of three poison liquor victims in this city and a nearby town today resulted this noon in the arrest of an unemployed shoe worker as the bootlegger who dispensed the deadly beverage.

Dominick Desormiers, 34, arrested at Brockton hospital where he was under treatment after drinking some of the concoction, will be charged with at least three counts of manslaughter, District Attorney Winfield M. Wilbar said.

SEBEKA FARMER WHO UPSET FUNERAL NOW TRYING TO RAISE BAIL

Wadena, Minn., July 8.—(U.P.)—Chas. Milbrandt, Sebeka farmer, was trying to raise bail today among the neighbors who were enraged when he came back to the funeral of Stanley Clark to puncture the tires with gunshot.

Milbrandt waived examination yesterday at a preliminary hearing before Justice Wallbridge on charges of malicious destruction of property. He said he had been ordered away from the services because he appeared in overalls. He was ordered held for trial in district court.

His brother, Gust, was freed of charges when it was claimed Charles did the shooting.

BRAINERD 25 Years Ago

July 8, 1906

Mrs. T. E. Canan and family left today for their future home in Jamestown, N. D. Many friends here regret to see them leave but wish them all prosperity and success in their new home.

Mrs. A. P. Sorrenson was stricken with hemorrhage of the stomach while on the street yesterday afternoon and was removed to St. Joseph's hospital where she is in a critical condition. She was resting easier early this morning.

Charles Cossett, of Crow Wing, was in the city this morning. He was on his way home from a trip to Alveston, Canada. He reports that Gideon Mott, who formerly kept a store at St. Mathias is prospering there. Mr. Cossett expects to return to Canada in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Denny and daughter Florence, who have been visiting Dr. and Mrs. Werner Hemstead, returned home today. Werner Hemstead, Jr., returned with them for a two week's visit.

Charles Peterson has taken back his saloon on Laurel street, heretofore conducted by O. M. Olson, and will hereafter conduct it himself.

Wolfred Olsen left for Chicago this afternoon to work for the Western Union Telegraph company.

The air brake instruction car of the Northern Pacific, which has been in the city several days having some new equipment installed, left for Duluth today. It is in charge of S. H. Draper, general air brake inspector and Miss Lillian C. Draper is clerk and secretary. Miss Draper speaks of the air brakes and their workings with a familiarity which would put many in engineer to the blush.

PILOT INJURED AS PLANE CRASHES AGAINST HILL

Martins Ferry, O., July 8.—(U.P.)—Charles Sugg, pilot in the national air tour, was injured seriously near here today when his airplane crashed against the side of a hill.

Sugg was taken to Martin's Ferry hospital where it was said his skull may have been fractured.

The flier landed at Martin's Ferry and took off from the lea of a high hill. He failed to gain sufficient altitude to clear the summit.

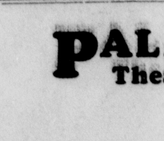

Farmers rushed to the badly wrecked plane in which Sugg was pinned. Broken parts of the craft were chopped away with axes before the flier could be removed.

The tour, composed of 30 airplanes, landed here from Wheeling, W. Va., en route to Columbus, O., for a noon stop.

NATIONS UNITING TO OUTLAW WAR

London, July 8.—(U.P.)—Out of 66 nations invited by the United States to adhere to the Kellogg treaty for the renunciation of war only six have failed so far to sign, Arthur Henderson, foreign secretary, told a questioner in the house of commons today.

The six who have not acted are Latin-American states—Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador, San Salvador and Uruguay.

Three Railways to Substitute Custodians for Agents at 5 Stations

St. Paul, July 8.—(U.P.)—Three railroads were granted permission today to substitute custodians for agents at five stations by the state railroad and warehouse commission.

Another road was granted permission to abandon its station. The Great Northern will move out of the station at Brevator in St. Louis county. Total business of the station during 1930 was $17.97, the commission learned.

The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad was permitted to substitute custodian service at Langdon, in Washington county; Minneiska in Wabasha county and Eggleston in Goodhue county.

The Soo Line will substitute a custodian at Almora in Otter Tail county and the Northern Pacific at Cushing in Morrison county.

3 POISON LIQUOR VICTIMS DIE IN BROCKTON, MASS.

Brockton, Mass., July 8.—(U.P.)—The deaths of three poison liquor victims in this city and a nearby town today resulted this noon in the arrest of an unemployed shoe worker as the bootlegger who dispensed the deadly beverage.

Dominick Desormiers, 34, arrested at Brockton hospital where he was under treatment after drinking some of the concoction, will be charged with at least three counts of manslaughter, District Attorney Winfield M. Wilbar said.

SEBEKA FARMER WHO UPSET FUNERAL NOW TRYING TO RAISE BAIL

Wadena, Minn., July 8.—(U.P.)—Chas. Milbrandt, Sebeka farmer, was trying to raise bail today among the neighbors who were enraged when he came back to the funeral of Stanley Clark to puncture the tires with gunshot.

Milbrandt waived examination yesterday at a preliminary hearing before Justice Wallbridge on charges of malicious destruction of property. He said he had been ordered away from the services because he appeared in overalls. He was ordered held for trial in district court.

His brother, Gust, was freed of charges when it was claimed Charles did the shooting.

quency for the child violator now tried as adult violators of federal law.

Pending enactment of this legislation the commission recommended:

"That a service be established by the attorney general for the purpose of supervising the handling of children; this service should include special registration and consistent verification of age of arrested minors; instructions to marshals and agents of the bureau of investigation, district attorneys and commissioners to investigate children's cases by means of federal probation officers of local juvenile courts; use of social agencies, foster homes, and juvenile detention homes instead of jails; encouragement of the policy now inherent in the practice of several districts to stay federal court proceedings until juvenile or other state courts have been consulted with view to co-operation; where federal courts must act, an extended use of probation for minors; where young children are now in penal institutions and jails under conditions improper to their welfare, their removal or parole."

Concluding, the report stated:

"It is recommended that the federal government recognize the concept of juvenile delinquency and withdraw the child offender from the ordinary operation of federal penal justice save in cases in which the local processes for dealing with delinquent children prove to be or plainly are inadequate.

"The precise nature of legislation required to accomplish this result will have to be determined by expert legal research."

Women Lawyers Defend Sex in Norris Ouster

* * * * * *

Removal of New York Woman Magistrate as Unfit Does Not Discourage Other Fair Ones From Seeking Careers in Law and on Bench.

Undaunted by the removal from the bench of Jean Norris, Manhattan's first and only woman judge, six hundred women attorneys of New York are emphatic in their stand that just because one of their sex has been declared unfit there is no reason to believe women generally are not capable of being lawyers and holding high judicial positions of trust. Lena M. Phillips, prominent attorney and international president of the B usiness and Professional Women's Clubs, says, in speaking of the Norris ouster: "It is unfair of what women will do on the bench. One such isolated case is not indicative of the qualifications of our sex for such a position." Miss Rose Rothenberg, the first woman in New York to become Assistant District Attorney, is being mentioned for the post from which Mrs. Norris was removed.

* * * * * *

Removal of New York Woman Magistrate as Unfit Does Not Discourage Other Fair Ones From Seeking Careers in Law and on Bench.

Undaunted by the removal from the bench of Jean Norris, Manhattan's first and only woman judge, six hundred women attorneys of New York are emphatic in their stand that just because one of their sex has been declared unfit there is no reason to believe women generally are not capable of being lawyers and holding high judicial positions of trust. Lena M. Phillips, prominent attorney and international president of the B usiness and Professional Women's Clubs, says, in speaking of the Norris ouster: "It is unfair of what women will do on the bench. One such isolated case is not indicative of the qualifications of our sex for such a position." Miss Rose Rothenberg, the first woman in New York to become Assistant District Attorney, is being mentioned for the post from which Mrs. Norris was removed.

Improved Crop Prospects

AN improvement in the crop prospects has come with the breaking of the heat wave and fair rains in most of the Northwest, the Farmers Union Terminal weekly crop report announces.

Here in Crow Wing county conditions are very good. Rain is falling when needed and it is generally considered good growing weather.

The review said that while little or no hope for a wheat crop is held in North Dakota and Montana, the rains have improved pasturage and filled water holes making it possible for farmers to hold their livestock. Further rains will be necessary, however, if the farmers in this territory wish to retain their livestock on farms, the report said.

"In sharp contrast to the deplorable crop conditions reported for drouth areas of twelve northwestern North Dakota and some twenty eastern Montana counties are crop reports from the eastern third of North Dakota and much of the southern half of the state," the report said.

"We are generally in line for a bumper crop, a report from Forbes, on the North Dakota-South Dakota boundary in east central Dakota says. Wheat, flax, pastures and all crops are excellent. Buxton, in the Red River valley, reports wheat, corn, barley, flax and pastures as 100 per cent."

Continuing in this optimistic vein the review said that crops throughout Minnesota continue excellent with the corn crop promising to be the best in several years and with favorable weather, possibilities for a record yield are good. The wheat crops around Crookston, Halstad, Moorhead and other Red River valley points are good. Recent rains have offset any damage that might have been caused by the extreme hot weather of late June.

The outlook in northern South Dakota remains favorable, particularly in the eastern part of the state, the review said.

Oiling of Dirt Roads Highly Beneficial

ACCORDING to the Bureau of Public Roads, the experience of the Missouri State Highway Department in the treatment of earth roads with oil since 1928 should be of value to other states and communities interested in low cost improvement of secondary or feeder roads to main highways.

The experiments reveal that the character of oil used must vary with local conditions. Soils which are naturally firm and dry, such as clay, require only water-proofing with a relatively light oil. Noncohesive soils, such as sand, need application of heavier oils to bind their particles together.

Missouri has found that oil treatment is especially effective in solving the problem of wash and erosion in roads built of noncohesive soils. In certain areas, the highway department was facing the necessity of purchasing additional rights of way in order to obtain earth for replacement of shoulders removed by erosion. Then oil treatment was tried and the erosion immediately stopped with a consequent reduction in maintenance costs. Furthermore, ordinary vehicular traffic is beneficial to the oil surfaces, through a kneading process. It is recommended, however, that the use of tractors on such roads be restricted.

Almost any state or county can follow Missouri's lead. Oil treatment makes it possible to give rural areas adequate, weatherproof roads at the lowest possible cost.

New Automobile Rates in Insurance

EFFECTIVE June 29 new automobile rates for public liability and property damage were announced by the National Bureau of Casualty & Surely Underwriters.

These rates are based on the experience of practically all companies writing these coverages in Minnesota for the years of 1927, 1928 and 1929. The average loss per car has increased each year during the three year period previously mentioned, and indications are that 1930 will be even more unprofitable for the insurance companies. There have been two and three rate revisions in other states since the last one in Minnesota and the increasing loss ratio made a revision mandatory.

Private passenger, commercial car and garage rates are comparatively high in Minneapolis and St. Paul, in suburban territory there, at Duluth and Duluth suburban. The balance of the state, which includes Brainerd, fares better in the new rates.

How to Treat Case of Poison Ivy

WITH summer days comes the possibility of developing a "case" of poison ivy and the Izaak Walton League in a recent bulletin gives a scientific method of caring for such a contingency.

The method is as follows:

First, infected parts should be washed with a strong soap and water solution. Next apply a 5 per cent solution of ferric chloride which has been added to a fifty-fifty solution of water and alcohol. Swab the infected parts thoroughly with cotton soaked in the chloride, and then apply compresses of the solution to the infected skin. Keep pads moist and well bandaged. Renew the solution at intervals.

Heavy Weekend Business in Brainerd

WITH the Fourth coming on Saturday, it made the weekend business of restaurants, hotels, confectionery stores, ice cream manufacturers, the movie houses, garages, filling stations, etc., swell to record proportions.

To mention just one tea room and fountain, Archer's served 1,300 meals the weekend. It gives an indication of the business done, for all shared in the large influx of holiday visitors.

Out at the lakes, hotels, resorts, cottages were filled. In fact, it is getting so nowadays that all of Minneapolis and St. Paul able to travel by car hies to the wide open places, at lake or countryside, to enjoy a holiday season. With the cool weather in evidence, it contributed largely to keeping down accidents or fatalities whether in the water or on the highways.

THE nearly 10,000 Minnesotans entitled to bonus checks for service in the Spanish-American war are scattered all over the United States. Although the St. Paul office has been open for business less than six weeks, about 5,000 applications or letters of inquiry have been received from every state in the Union except Nevada, as well as from several foreign countries. Bonus check No. 1 relieved a blind man who was in dire need.

ST. PAUL department stores now close at 5 p. m. daily during the summer months.

First Aid Training Boon To Girl Scouts on Hikes

Minor accidents will happen on the best regulated hike, but they have no terrors for the Girl Scout who, living up to her creed, is "prepared" to meet emergencies with her first-aid kit.

Slain Warden

Charles W. Eldredge, state game inspector and McHenry county, Ill., politician, who was shot and killed Saturday night on his private game preserve near Richmond, Ill. Police believe Eldredge was slain by a poacher whom he sought to arrest. Eldredge was a former Chicago lawyer, was a member of the Illinois legislature for two terms and was for years a state game inspector.

Following the crash of his plane on Joan Marbury's Florida orange groves, young and wealthy Dave Ordway is content with the peaceful life on the plantation that is a contrast to his former pleasure-seeking existence. Adventure awaits him here, however. Mueller, brutal owner of the adjoining groves, is trying to force his attentions upon Joan. He robs Dave and burns his plane because Dave refuses his demands for damage to Mueller's property in landing. Joan's cousin, Sally, who lives on the plantation, is in love with Dave, but he is more attracted by the reserved Joan. When Dave's erstwhile fiancee, Barbara Holworthy, and his friends, Gerry Flemming and Talbot Henderson, visit him, he is aware of the antagonism among the girls. Gerry recognizes Mueller as "Snatch" Cazzoni, a bootlegger. The boys leave to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's. They discover Mueller's liquor store. Fearing trouble Dave has Talbot return to warn the girls to stay at home.

CHAPTER XXI

TALBOT bolted toward the door, then stopped abruptly.

"I promised to bring Dave some flashlights. Have you any, Miss Marbury?"

Joan and Sally had settled back in their chairs and were watching Barbara, who had just screwed another cigarette into her long red holder and was smoking with quick, nervous puffs.

"This is certainly a wow, this party you've brought me to," said Barbara, bitterly. "And to think that we missed a costume ball at the Vinoy Park!"

"Don't forget you invited yourself along, Babs," retorted Talbot, heatedly. "Gerry and I were all for dashing over here and bringing Dave back with us. But no; you got all warm and uncomfortable about something and had to come, too. Well, you're here, my spoiled sweetheart, so be a good sport about it."

Truth Hurts

"This is one of your horrid nights, Talbot," she snapped. She turned to the Marbury girls with a shrug. "His manners are beastly, aren't they?"

"Honest criticism is never pleasant to hear," retorted Sally, her black eyes glinting.

Barbara's insolent stare encompassed the younger girl, examining her simple wash dress, her carefully-mended silken hose, her somewhat shabby slippers. Sally, a vivid spot of color on each tanned cheek, matched her, stare for stare.

"Miss Marbury," said Talbot, hastily, "have you any flashlights you could lend us?"

Joan rose and left the room. Barbara tossed her cigarette end into a flower pot.

"I suppose I'll ruin this frock," she sighed, "but I'm tired of it, anyway."

"I'll say you'll ruin it," agreed Talbot, vindictively. "And you'll need new shoes, too. If you're going, you'll have to ankle every step of the way!"

He whirled and retreated precipitantly, slamming the door behind him. Joan returned with the flashlights just in time to hear his heavy footsteps clattering across the porch.

Hannah's portly figure was framed in the dining-room door.

"Miss Joan, is y'awl gwine out?" she asked anxiously.

Joan glanced uncertainly toward Barbara, whose hand was already upon the door knob. Sally, too, had risen and was following Barbara.

"Yes, Hannah," she said. "We'll be back in an hour or so."

Hannah untied her voluminous white apron and began to fold it. Her eyes rolled whitely and her huge mouth was set in a straight red line of determination.

"Miss Joan," she declared positively, "I enta gwine res' in dis house one little minute alone. Lawd, no! Dey's too much ruckus gwine on dis night. I'se gwine righty along wi' you, I is."

Left Behind

"Let her come, Joan," laughed Sally. "We can leave her in the car while we go after the boys."

Barbara opened the door and peered out into the night. The sound of a whining motor came into the room.

"Talbot has taken the car," she said.

"It doesn't matter," said Joan. "I know where they are. We can take our Ford."

"That will be most amusing, I'm sure," purred Barbara.

Talbot, unconsciously crooning a melancholy version of Gerry's favorite blues, was brought to a startled halt by a sibilant whisper from the adjacent underbrush.

"Shut up!" hissed Dave. "Are you practicing for a hog-calling contest? Between you and Gerry, all I need is a college cheer leader to keep the noises organized."

"Don't you pop out at me like that!" gasped Talbot. "For two cents I'd stand here and howl, I'm that nervous."

"One more yip out of you and I'll tie you and Gerry together, gag you both and turn you loose in the scrub," retorted Dave, emerging from the thicket which surrounded the nearest of the abandoned houses.

"Where's my car?" demanded Gerry, thickly, appearing from behind Dave.

"Well, well, well!" commented Talbot, admiringly. "Still schmozzled, what?"

Gerry, weaving gently, bestowed an unfavorable glance upon his stout friend.

"Where's my car?" he repeated. "Dave won't let me go find Mueller. I'm going home."

"Your car is in the road back there, with its bow turned back toward Joan's. But don't worry about not finding Mueller. This is a night when my perceptions are sharp. Something tells me that we'll have an eyeful of Mueller before the sun rises."

"Are the girls all right?" interrupted Dave impatiently.

"Well, they didn't seem very chatty with each other," returned Talbot evasively. "They've been sitting around hating each other all evening. I sort of gathered the idea that they were a little bored or something."

"You get behind Gerry and see that he doesn't stray away," directed Dave. "We ought to hang a cowbell around his neck. Come on, let's go."

"Go where?" demanded Gerry, truculently. "No sense in wasting good liquor like this. I've got a fight in me. Ought to use it. Don't like the way Mueller parts his hair, or the color of his necktie, or the perfumes he's doused with. Want to tell him so. Tired of walking. Never did like to walk."

"Too bad that liquor hasn't got a silencer in it," commented Talbot, sadly. "It certainly sets Gerry to talking. If it should set him to thinking, too, no telling what might happen. Go on, now, Gerry, old soak, and follow Dave before he leaves us flat."

"Don't forget you invited yourself along, Babs," retorted Talbot, heatedly.

Dave was already pushing through the underbrush, leading the way toward the black bulk which loomed over the tops of the scrub pines and young cabbage palm.

Bottles Everywhere

"The second house was jammed to the ridgepole with liquor, Talbot," he whispered. "Now we're going to have a look at the house near the county road. There's been a whale of an uproar from over by the landing field. Guess the guard got loose and set them all to rushing about looking for us. They're likely to come over this way at any moment, now."

They crossed the wide flagstone porch of the abandoned house. Palmetto scrub was pushing its way up between the flags, upending them in its remorseless, patient strength. The front door, a massive slab of pecked cypress, swung listlessly on creaking hinges of hammered iron. Within was a vast, echoing expanse of black hallway, at the other end of which was a patch of dim light, the door to the patio in the rear.

Dave groped his way along the hall, glancing into the huge, high-ceilinged rooms which stretched off to either side.

ALL-AMERICAN SHIP CANAL ROUTE UNDER FIRE AT MEETING

Albany, N. Y., July 8.—(UP)—A new and serious threat to the proposed all-American ship canal route in this state had developed today after the annual meeting of the Great Lakes-Hudson Waterways association.

Buffalo delegates, dissatisfied with the attitude of U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland and others, bolted the meeting and served notice that unless Buffalo was included in the ship canal route project, the city could not lend its support.

The trend of discussion indicated that if the canal ever was built it would extend from Albany to Oswego, on Lake Ontario, and not to Buffalo.

COL. LINDBERGH TO GIVE NEW PLANE THOROUGH TEST

New York, July 8—(UP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will fly his new Lockheed-Birus plane through a rigorous test late this week or carly next week, it was indicated today, as mechanics completed the task of removing a small gasoline tank from the fuselage.

The tank was eliminated to provide more room for baggage on Lindbergh's projected flight to the Orient. Lindbergh already has made two test flights in the speedy plane.

Improved Crop Prospects

AN improvement in the crop prospects has come with the breaking of the heat wave and fair rains in most of the Northwest, the Farmers Union Terminal weekly crop report announces.

Here in Crow Wing county conditions are very good. Rain is falling when needed and it is generally considered good growing weather.

The review said that while little or no hope for a wheat crop is held in North Dakota and Montana, the rains have improved pasturage and filled water holes making it possible for farmers to hold their livestock. Further rains will be necessary, however, if the farmers in this territory wish to retain their livestock on farms, the report said.

"In sharp contrast to the deplorable crop conditions reported for drouth areas of twelve northwestern North Dakota and some twenty eastern Montana counties are crop reports from the eastern third of North Dakota and much of the southern half of the state," the report said.

"We are generally in line for a bumper crop, a report from Forbes, on the North Dakota-South Dakota boundary in east central Dakota says. Wheat, flax, pastures and all crops are excellent. Buxton, in the Red River valley, reports wheat, corn, barley, flax and pastures as 100 per cent."

Continuing in this optimistic vein the review said that crops throughout Minnesota continue excellent with the corn crop promising to be the best in several years and with favorable weather, possibilities for a record yield are good. The wheat crops around Crookston, Halstad, Moorhead and other Red River valley points are good. Recent rains have offset any damage that might have been caused by the extreme hot weather of late June.

The outlook in northern South Dakota remains favorable, particularly in the eastern part of the state, the review said.

Oiling of Dirt Roads Highly Beneficial

ACCORDING to the Bureau of Public Roads, the experience of the Missouri State Highway Department in the treatment of earth roads with oil since 1928 should be of value to other states and communities interested in low cost improvement of secondary or feeder roads to main highways.

The experiments reveal that the character of oil used must vary with local conditions. Soils which are naturally firm and dry, such as clay, require only water-proofing with a relatively light oil. Noncohesive soils, such as sand, need application of heavier oils to bind their particles together.

Missouri has found that oil treatment is especially effective in solving the problem of wash and erosion in roads built of noncohesive soils. In certain areas, the highway department was facing the necessity of purchasing additional rights of way in order to obtain earth for replacement of shoulders removed by erosion. Then oil treatment was tried and the erosion immediately stopped with a consequent reduction in maintenance costs. Furthermore, ordinary vehicular traffic is beneficial to the oil surfaces, through a kneading process. It is recommended, however, that the use of tractors on such roads be restricted.

Almost any state or county can follow Missouri's lead. Oil treatment makes it possible to give rural areas adequate, weatherproof roads at the lowest possible cost.

New Automobile Rates in Insurance

EFFECTIVE June 29 new automobile rates for public liability and property damage were announced by the National Bureau of Casualty & Surely Underwriters.

These rates are based on the experience of practically all companies writing these coverages in Minnesota for the years of 1927, 1928 and 1929. The average loss per car has increased each year during the three year period previously mentioned, and indications are that 1930 will be even more unprofitable for the insurance companies. There have been two and three rate revisions in other states since the last one in Minnesota and the increasing loss ratio made a revision mandatory.

Private passenger, commercial car and garage rates are comparatively high in Minneapolis and St. Paul, in suburban territory there, at Duluth and Duluth suburban. The balance of the state, which includes Brainerd, fares better in the new rates.

How to Treat Case of Poison Ivy

WITH summer days comes the possibility of developing a "case" of poison ivy and the Izaak Walton League in a recent bulletin gives a scientific method of caring for such a contingency.

The method is as follows:

First, infected parts should be washed with a strong soap and water solution. Next apply a 5 per cent solution of ferric chloride which has been added to a fifty-fifty solution of water and alcohol. Swab the infected parts thoroughly with cotton soaked in the chloride, and then apply compresses of the solution to the infected skin. Keep pads moist and well bandaged. Renew the solution at intervals.

Heavy Weekend Business in Brainerd

WITH the Fourth coming on Saturday, it made the weekend business of restaurants, hotels, confectionery stores, ice cream manufacturers, the movie houses, garages, filling stations, etc., swell to record proportions.

To mention just one tea room and fountain, Archer's served 1,300 meals the weekend. It gives an indication of the business done, for all shared in the large influx of holiday visitors.

Out at the lakes, hotels, resorts, cottages were filled. In fact, it is getting so nowadays that all of Minneapolis and St. Paul able to travel by car hies to the wide open places, at lake or countryside, to enjoy a holiday season. With the cool weather in evidence, it contributed largely to keeping down accidents or fatalities whether in the water or on the highways.

THE nearly 10,000 Minnesotans entitled to bonus checks for service in the Spanish-American war are scattered all over the United States. Although the St. Paul office has been open for business less than six weeks, about 5,000 applications or letters of inquiry have been received from every state in the Union except Nevada, as well as from several foreign countries. Bonus check No. 1 relieved a blind man who was in dire need.

ST. PAUL department stores now close at 5 p. m. daily during the summer months.

First Aid Training Boon To Girl Scouts on Hikes

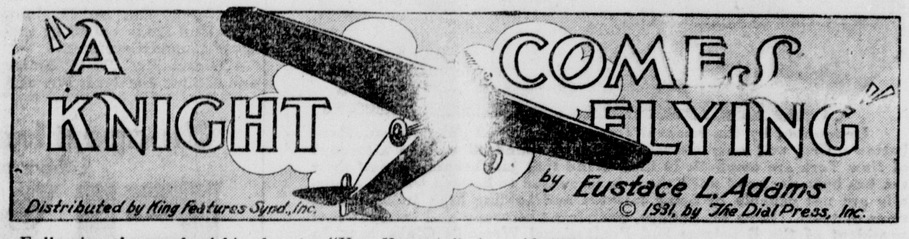

Minor accidents will happen on the best regulated hike, but they have no terrors for the Girl Scout who, living up to her creed, is "prepared" to meet emergencies with her first-aid kit.

Slain Warden

Charles W. Eldredge, state game inspector and McHenry county, Ill., politician, who was shot and killed Saturday night on his private game preserve near Richmond, Ill. Police believe Eldredge was slain by a poacher whom he sought to arrest. Eldredge was a former Chicago lawyer, was a member of the Illinois legislature for two terms and was for years a state game inspector.

Following the crash of his plane on Joan Marbury's Florida orange groves, young and wealthy Dave Ordway is content with the peaceful life on the plantation that is a contrast to his former pleasure-seeking existence. Adventure awaits him here, however. Mueller, brutal owner of the adjoining groves, is trying to force his attentions upon Joan. He robs Dave and burns his plane because Dave refuses his demands for damage to Mueller's property in landing. Joan's cousin, Sally, who lives on the plantation, is in love with Dave, but he is more attracted by the reserved Joan. When Dave's erstwhile fiancee, Barbara Holworthy, and his friends, Gerry Flemming and Talbot Henderson, visit him, he is aware of the antagonism among the girls. Gerry recognizes Mueller as "Snatch" Cazzoni, a bootlegger. The boys leave to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's. They discover Mueller's liquor store. Fearing trouble Dave has Talbot return to warn the girls to stay at home.

CHAPTER XXI

TALBOT bolted toward the door, then stopped abruptly.

"I promised to bring Dave some flashlights. Have you any, Miss Marbury?"

Joan and Sally had settled back in their chairs and were watching Barbara, who had just screwed another cigarette into her long red holder and was smoking with quick, nervous puffs.

"This is certainly a wow, this party you've brought me to," said Barbara, bitterly. "And to think that we missed a costume ball at the Vinoy Park!"

"Don't forget you invited yourself along, Babs," retorted Talbot, heatedly. "Gerry and I were all for dashing over here and bringing Dave back with us. But no; you got all warm and uncomfortable about something and had to come, too. Well, you're here, my spoiled sweetheart, so be a good sport about it."

Truth Hurts

"This is one of your horrid nights, Talbot," she snapped. She turned to the Marbury girls with a shrug. "His manners are beastly, aren't they?"

"Honest criticism is never pleasant to hear," retorted Sally, her black eyes glinting.

Barbara's insolent stare encompassed the younger girl, examining her simple wash dress, her carefully-mended silken hose, her somewhat shabby slippers. Sally, a vivid spot of color on each tanned cheek, matched her, stare for stare.

"Miss Marbury," said Talbot, hastily, "have you any flashlights you could lend us?"

Joan rose and left the room. Barbara tossed her cigarette end into a flower pot.

"I suppose I'll ruin this frock," she sighed, "but I'm tired of it, anyway."

"I'll say you'll ruin it," agreed Talbot, vindictively. "And you'll need new shoes, too. If you're going, you'll have to ankle every step of the way!"

He whirled and retreated precipitantly, slamming the door behind him. Joan returned with the flashlights just in time to hear his heavy footsteps clattering across the porch.

Hannah's portly figure was framed in the dining-room door.

"Miss Joan, is y'awl gwine out?" she asked anxiously.

Joan glanced uncertainly toward Barbara, whose hand was already upon the door knob. Sally, too, had risen and was following Barbara.

"Yes, Hannah," she said. "We'll be back in an hour or so."

Hannah untied her voluminous white apron and began to fold it. Her eyes rolled whitely and her huge mouth was set in a straight red line of determination.

"Miss Joan," she declared positively, "I enta gwine res' in dis house one little minute alone. Lawd, no! Dey's too much ruckus gwine on dis night. I'se gwine righty along wi' you, I is."

Left Behind

"Let her come, Joan," laughed Sally. "We can leave her in the car while we go after the boys."

Barbara opened the door and peered out into the night. The sound of a whining motor came into the room.

"Talbot has taken the car," she said.

"It doesn't matter," said Joan. "I know where they are. We can take our Ford."

"That will be most amusing, I'm sure," purred Barbara.

Talbot, unconsciously crooning a melancholy version of Gerry's favorite blues, was brought to a startled halt by a sibilant whisper from the adjacent underbrush.

"Shut up!" hissed Dave. "Are you practicing for a hog-calling contest? Between you and Gerry, all I need is a college cheer leader to keep the noises organized."

"Don't you pop out at me like that!" gasped Talbot. "For two cents I'd stand here and howl, I'm that nervous."

"One more yip out of you and I'll tie you and Gerry together, gag you both and turn you loose in the scrub," retorted Dave, emerging from the thicket which surrounded the nearest of the abandoned houses.

"Where's my car?" demanded Gerry, thickly, appearing from behind Dave.

"Well, well, well!" commented Talbot, admiringly. "Still schmozzled, what?"

Gerry, weaving gently, bestowed an unfavorable glance upon his stout friend.

"Where's my car?" he repeated. "Dave won't let me go find Mueller. I'm going home."

"Your car is in the road back there, with its bow turned back toward Joan's. But don't worry about not finding Mueller. This is a night when my perceptions are sharp. Something tells me that we'll have an eyeful of Mueller before the sun rises."

"Are the girls all right?" interrupted Dave impatiently.

"Well, they didn't seem very chatty with each other," returned Talbot evasively. "They've been sitting around hating each other all evening. I sort of gathered the idea that they were a little bored or something."

"You get behind Gerry and see that he doesn't stray away," directed Dave. "We ought to hang a cowbell around his neck. Come on, let's go."

"Go where?" demanded Gerry, truculently. "No sense in wasting good liquor like this. I've got a fight in me. Ought to use it. Don't like the way Mueller parts his hair, or the color of his necktie, or the perfumes he's doused with. Want to tell him so. Tired of walking. Never did like to walk."

"Too bad that liquor hasn't got a silencer in it," commented Talbot, sadly. "It certainly sets Gerry to talking. If it should set him to thinking, too, no telling what might happen. Go on, now, Gerry, old soak, and follow Dave before he leaves us flat."

"Don't forget you invited yourself along, Babs," retorted Talbot, heatedly.

Dave was already pushing through the underbrush, leading the way toward the black bulk which loomed over the tops of the scrub pines and young cabbage palm.

Bottles Everywhere

"The second house was jammed to the ridgepole with liquor, Talbot," he whispered. "Now we're going to have a look at the house near the county road. There's been a whale of an uproar from over by the landing field. Guess the guard got loose and set them all to rushing about looking for us. They're likely to come over this way at any moment, now."

They crossed the wide flagstone porch of the abandoned house. Palmetto scrub was pushing its way up between the flags, upending them in its remorseless, patient strength. The front door, a massive slab of pecked cypress, swung listlessly on creaking hinges of hammered iron. Within was a vast, echoing expanse of black hallway, at the other end of which was a patch of dim light, the door to the patio in the rear.

Dave groped his way along the hall, glancing into the huge, high-ceilinged rooms which stretched off to either side.

ALL-AMERICAN SHIP CANAL ROUTE UNDER FIRE AT MEETING

Albany, N. Y., July 8.—(U.P.)—A new and serious threat to the proposed all-American ship canal route in this state had developed today after the annual meeting of the Great Lakes-Hudson Waterways association.

Buffalo delegates, dissatisfied with the attitude of U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland and others, bolted the meeting and served notice that unless Buffalo was included in the ship canal route project, the city could not lend its support.

The trend of discussion indicated that if the canal ever was built it would extend from Albany to Oswego, on Lake Ontario, and not to Buffalo.

COL. LINDBERGH TO GIVE NEW PLANE THOROUGH TEST

New York, July 8—(U.P.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will fly his new Lockheed-Birus plane through a rigorous test late this week or early next week, it was indicated today, as mechanics completed the task of removing a small gasoline tank from the fuselage.

The tank was eliminated to provide more room for baggage on Lindbergh's projected flight to the Orient. Lindbergh already has made two test flights in the speedy plane.

HAYWARD WINS SINGLES TITLE AT SIOUX INDIAN SHOOT

BADGER SHOOTER CRACKS 194 CLAY PIGEONS OUT OF 200

TOP HONORS IN MISS AND OUT SPECIALTY WON BY H. H. JOHNSON, WATERTOWN

TODAY'S COMPETITION HAS THE SHOOTERS OUT IN INDIAN COSTUME AT BREEZY

Leading a field of one hundred Northwest crack trapshooters yesterday, D. C. Hayward of Weyanwega, Wis., won the 200 singles championship at the Sioux Indian Trapshooting meet being staged at Breezy Point by cracking 194 out of 200 targets. Despite an unfavorable wind that raised havoc with the clay pigeons, Hayward shattered the decoys in the same fashion as he did to cop the preliminary Grand American championship at Chicago in 1923. Runner-up honors were shared by Ed Micka, Hibbing, Charlie Kaltschnel, Fassenden, S. D., and Bill Drennen of Faulkton, S. D., with scores of 191. Kaltschnel recently won the South Dakota state championship while Drennen is a newcomer to the shooting ranks. Otto Nelson won the third place award by virtue of his 190 score.

Premier honors in the traditional miss and out specialty event went to H. H. Johnson of Watertown, S. D., with Chas. Green, Aberdeen, S. D., as runner-up.

In the special shoot held for the squaws of the Indian shooters, Mrs. Earl Donahue, Minneapolis, and Mrs. Carl Cummins of St. Paul divided first place honors, being followed by Mrs. Wm. Drennen of Faulkton, S. D., and Mrs. F. D. Hawkins of Sioux Falls, S D.

Today's competition will be featured by the renowned monkey shoot in which all shooters are required to wear the colorful costumes of the Sioux Indians.

STARS AND DUFFERS SCORE HIGH WITH NEW BALL

TOP FLIGHT FAVORED TO WIN THE $10,000 ADDED LASSIE STAKES

Chicago, July 8.—(U.P.)—Top Flight, owned by C. V. (Sonny) Whitney, was a 5-2 favorite to capture the $10,000 added Lassie stakes for 2-year-old fillies at Arlington park racetrack today.

Twenty-five fillies were named overnight for the 4½ furlong race. If all 25 go to the post, the race will have a gross value of $28,150 and the winner will get $24,530.

Eligibility

NEW GOLF BALL IS MAKING FOR HIGHER SCORING

A UNITED PRESS SURVEY DISCLOSES SITUATION, SCORE COMPARISON MADE

MOST RECENT TEST MADE AT TOLEDO, O., WHERE BILL BURKE WON

By L. S. CAMERON
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, July 8.—The new balloon ball of United States golf makes for higher scoring by stars as well as by duffers, a United Press survey disclosed today.

A comparison was made of scores turned in for the last two Open championships, the most recent of which, held at Toledo, O., was won by Bill Burke of Greenwich, Conn. The 1931 championship was played over a 71-par course, while other recent Opens were held on courses with pars of 72.

The 30 leaders of 1931 required 9,012 for the 72 holes they played in the championship proper. The 30 leaders of the year before also used up 9,012 strokes, but, as pointed out, this year's course had a lower par.

The first 15 players of last year's championship who also played the first four rounds this year, had higher totals in 1931. These leading stars required 4,482 strokes in 1930, and 4,552 strokes in 1931, despite the fact that Inverness, scene of the 1931 championship, has a par of one stroke lower than that of Interlachen at Minneapolis, where the tournament was held last season.

By way of individual comparison, Mac Smith who was runner-up in 1930, scored 289 in that tournament, and 299 this year. Horton Smith had 292 last year, and 306 at Toledo. Harry Cooper, Johnny Golden and Tommy Armour, all had higher scores this year, especially Armour, who finished far back with 315.

Johnny Farrell had 292 each year. Bill Mehlhorn this year was four strokes below his 1930 total, and Leo Diegel was seven strokes below. Geo. Von Elm had 301 at Interlachen and 292 at Inverness. Bill Burke, who tied for 27th place last year, totalling 306, had 292 in tying Von Elm when the championship proper at Inverness was complete.

The U. S. G. A. should be glad of these results for the new ball was designed to eliminate inordinate distance and extreme low scoring. But the new ball continues to be highly unpopular with the duffer.

PAT SAWYER, DEFENDING CHAMP, IS ELIMINATED

LOSES IN 1ST ROUND OF MATCH PLAY OF STATE AMATEUR GOLF TOURNAMENT

LESTER BOLSTAD, MEDALIST, ST. PAUL, OVERCOMES PHIL HALVORSON

Minneapolis, Minn., July 8.—(U.P.)—Pat Sawyer, defending champion, was eliminated in the first round of the State Amateur Golf Tournament match play today by Allen Labatt, of Minneapolis, 2 up.

Other favorites survived first round play. Lester Bolstad, St. Paul, medalist and outstanding favorite of the tournament, easily overcame Phil Halvorson, Minneapolis, 4 and 2.

Dan J. Kennedy, Winnipeg, who tied with Sawyer for second place in the qualifying round, had little difficulty with Don Burris, Minneapolis. He won 4 and 3.

Labatt was expected to have comparatively easy sailing to get into the finals after his victory over Sawyer. In the upper bracket, however, Bolstad must meet Kennedy as well as a number of other low qualifying round scorers.

Other results of morning round matches included Ted Parker defeating Dave Grannis, 4 and 3; Lee Herron, beating Lynn Johnson, 7 and 5; Ade Fordham, besting Al Snell, 2 and 1; Stan Larson defeating Dick Putnam, 4 and 3; W. H. Forbes, Jr., downing Willy Taft, 3 and 2, and C. I. Long defeating B. Bergman, 4 and 3.

Play was halted several times today by intermittent showers. Pairings in the upper bracket for the afternoon round included Bolstad vs. Parker, Herron vs. Fordham, Larson vs. Forbes and Kennedy vs. Long.

The lower bracket matches may be postponed because of rain, it was said.

Odor of Food

If the odor of oil of lavender is agreeable to you, place a few drops of it in a bowl and leave on the dining room table. The aroma will refresh the atmosphere and counteract the effects of cooking odors coming from the kitchens.

An Easier Way

Dropping broken ice on clouds can produce rain, declares a scientist. But what's wrong with the much simpler method of cleaning the car?

FAN DIES OF HEART ATTACK AT BALL GAME

Chicago, July 8.—(U.P.)—Arthur Breiholz, Cornell, Ill., died of a heart attack after battling his way through the crowd yesterday to see the Chicago Cubs. About 15 other persons collapsed during the jam. Yesterday's crowd was larger than either of those that saw the two world series games between the Cubs and Athletics here in 1929.

ATHLETICS ARE HEADED FOR THE AMERICAN TITLE

WASHINGTON SENATORS KNOW IT WILL TAKE OVER SEVEN TEAMS TO STOP THEM

PARTICULARLY IF CONNIE MACK LETS GEORGE EARNSHAW PITCH

By LEO H. PETERSEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, July 8.—(U.P.)—The Washington Senators are just about convinced that it will take more than seven ball teams to keep the Philadelphia Athletics from winning their third consecutive American league pennant, particularly if Connie Mack lets George Earnshaw pitch as often as he wants to.

Earnshaw, although having pitched a full contest against the Senators Sunday, offered to work again yesterday when Lefty Grove didn't feel quite up to snuff. So Mack let his big right handed ace start his second game in the present series against the club which looms as the lone obstacle between the world champions and the 1931 title.

President and Mrs. Hoover were among the 12,000 fans who say Earnshaw turn back the Senators, 7 to 3, on eight scattered hits.

In registering his fourteenth victory against four defeats, Yarnshaw was aided by timely hitting by his mates against Crowder and Fischer, two of the stars of the Washington mound staff. The win increased the Athletics lead over the Senators to five and one half games.

Chicago deefated St. Louis, 10 to 8 in 12 innings, in the other American league contest. Pinch-hitter Kimsey of the Browns sent the game into extra innings when he hit a home run in the ninth inning. Singles by Watwood, Blue and Simons accounted for the winning White Sox tallies.

The double header on the program for New York and Boston was postponed because of rain while Cleveland and Detroit were not scheduled.

The Chicago Cubs advanced to third place in the national league, only three and one half games from the leadership, by turning back the pace-setting St. Louis Cardinals in a double header, 14 to 2 and 6 to 3. The twin victory placed the Chicago nine .002 percentage points ahead of Brooklyn.

Charley Root held the Cardinals in check in the first game while his mates, led by Hack Wilson, pounded Hallahan and Johnson hard. The Cubs came from behind in the aftermath to score four runs off Flint Rhem in the eighth inning and clinch the contest.

Brooklyn took advantage of the St. Louis setbacks to defeat Philandelphia 5 to 1 and remain as a serious menace to the Cardinals 1931 flag winning hopes. Babe Phelps and old Jack Quinn allowed the Phillies 11 hits between them but both were effective with men on bases.

Other scheduled games were rained out.

TAKE AN 8 TO 5 GAME FROM COLUMBUS IN OPENER OF SERIES

LOUISVILLE, IN SECOND PLACE, SPLITS DOUBLE-HEADER WITH KANSAS CITY

(By United Press)

St. Paul boosted its lead in the American Association yesterday by taking an 8 to 5 game from Columbus in the opening game of the series.

Louisville, second place club, in the meantime split a double-header with Kansas City, taking the first game, 2 to 1, and losing the second, 4 to 8.

Art Shires was the star of the circuit yesterday when he brought in six runs with a homer, a double and a single to help Milwaukee defeat Indianapolis, 12 to 6. The Indians took the second contest, 4 to 2.

Minneapolis, in fourth place, made the biggest gain of the day by trimming Toledo in two games, 5 to 3, and 1 to 0.

The same clubs meet each other again today.

Reviving Lost Art

By HARDIN BURNLEY

ONE OF the most vivid sensations of big league baseball throughout the Spring was the dazzling base-stealing of Ben Chapman, fleetest of the active New York Yankee outfielders, whose daring dashes for second and third rekindled glorious memories of Ty Cobb, Max Carey, Josh Devore, Eddie Collins and other immortals in that specialty of the national game.

If Chapman can maintain the pace he set throughout the Spring and early Summer, he may finish the season with sixty or more stolen bases. Naturally, as his "rep" spreads, catchers make it more and more difficult for Ben to do his base-line burning stuff. Pitchers, too, concentrate on keeping him closer and closer to first base. Ben's a marked man whenever he's on a sack. So it will be almost a miracle if Chapman can steal more than fifty bases in 1931.

As all masters of that art agree, Chapman knows that the long lead-off and perfect timing of the dash's start are as important as speed in successful base-stealing. Watching Ben skilfully edge a few more inches off first, teasing the pitcher to the nerve-cracking point, and then flashing towards second usually with a zippy hook-slide finale has become almost as fan-fascinating as a Ruthian homer.

Chapman is 23 years old, six foot tall, and weighs about 175 pounds. He looks agile and swift afoot, and is all that. Furthermore Ben has an extremely alert intelligence which equips him with that sense of timing the start, so vital in getting the jump on a smart pitcher and sharpshooting catcher.

Until Chapman's sack-sizzling splurge, that art had seemed to vanish from the game with the passing of Max Carey, who led the National League in that department ten times. Home runs and other long hitting naturally lessened the need of base burglary. That thrilling detail was all but a memory when Chapman revived it to the delight of many fans. Now sport bugs throughout the land are acclaiming the game's "Burglar Ben" as their idol.

WOMEN golfers are coming more and more to the fore, but none yet approaches the genius and fame of Miss Joyce Wethered, of England, who retired from active competition in the full flush of her powers, about two years ago. Comparison with Wethered seems almost unfair because in her sphere Joyce was even more incomparable than Bobby Jones in his. She was a phenomenon who played golf better than many of its male masters. Even when she didn't bear down, few female links champions could give her a close match. The Colletts, Orcutts, and all other extremely talented competition were hardly more than foils—excellent ones at that—for the genius of Joyce. Finally, she found herself in Alexander's plight—there were no more worlds to conquer on the links—and so Wethered retired when she was as potent a world's champion as ever lived. She left the matter of supremacy open, but none yet has laid definite stake to world laurels.

Wethered's withdrawal affected but did not damage women's golf. Sportdom misses Joyce, yet its acclaim is more hearty than ever for such lady golfers as the remarkable veteran, Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Philadelphia, and the young Miss Edith Quier, just to cite two idols for the present.

Recently Mrs. Hurd defeated our national champion, Glenna Collett, 4 and 3, in the Griscom Cup series between New York and Philadelphia women's teams. Her last five holes were 4, 4, 4, 3 and 4—a score that only a Wethered might be expected to improve upon. Mrs. Hurd knew her niblicks and putters when most of her current rivals were learning to grasp rattles. What an extraordinary athlete she is!

Miss Quier has been improving steadily for two seasons now and she seems to be ready for national honors. Champion Collett, Miss Maureen Orcutt, Miss "Billie" Hicks and three or four others are still rated ahead of Miss Quier, but the latter, on form displayed during the late Spring, should be right in line to succeed Glenna.

HAYWARD WINS SINGLES TITLE AT SIOUX INDIAN SHOOT

BADGER SHOOTER CRACKS 194 CLAY PIGEONS OUT OF 200

TOP HONORS IN MISS AND OUT SPECIALTY WON BY H. H. JOHNSON, WATERTOWN

TODAY'S COMPETITION HAS THE SHOOTERS OUT IN INDIAN COSTUME AT BREEZY

Leading a field of one hundred Northwest crack trapshooters yesterday, D. C. Hayward of Weyanwega, Wis., won the 200 singles championship at the Sioux Indian Trapshooting meet being staged at Breezy Point by cracking 194 out of 200 targets. Despite an unfavorable wind that raised havoc with the clay pigeons, Hayward shattered the decoys in the same fashion as he did to cop the preliminary Grand American championship at Chicago in 1923. Runner-up honors were shared by Ed Micka, Hibbing, Charlie Kaltschnel, Fassenden, S. D., and Bill Drennen of Faulkton, S. D., with scores of 191. Kaltschnel recently won the South Dakota state championship while Drennen is a newcomer to the shooting ranks. Otto Nelson won the third place award by virtue of his 190 score.

Premier honors in the traditional miss and out specialty event went to H. H. Johnson of Watertown, S. D., with Chas. Green, Aberdeen, S. D., as runner-up.

In the special shoot held for the squaws of the Indian shooters, Mrs. Earl Donahue, Minneapolis, and Mrs. Carl Cummins of St. Paul divided first place honors, being followed by Mrs. Wm. Drennen of Faulkton, S. D., and Mrs. F. D. Hawkins of Sioux Falls, S D.

Today's competition will be featured by the renowned monkey shoot in which all shooters are required to wear the colorful costumes of the Sioux Indians.

STARS AND DUFFERS SCORE HIGH WITH NEW BALL

TOP FLIGHT FAVORED TO WIN THE $10,000 ADDED LASSIE STAKES

Chicago, July 8.—(U.P.)—Top Flight, owned by C. V. (Sonny) Whitney, was a 5-2 favorite to capture the $10,000 added Lassie stakes for 2-year-old fillies at Arlington park racetrack today.

Twenty-five fillies were named overnight for the 4½ furlong race. If all 25 go to the post, the race will have a gross value of $28,150 and the winner will get $24,530.

In addition to Top Flight, the outstanding contenders in the Lassie stakes are Marcasite, Butter Beans, At Sunrise, Polonaise, Gala Flight, Dark Seeker, Lady Teddy and Princess Camelia.

Eligibility

The wise professor was correcting examination papers. He came to one that had "William Jones, English 4" in the upper left hand corner and just below, "I'm the captain of the football team." The rest of the paper was blank. The wise professor marked it A-plus and went on with his work.

NEW GOLF BALL IS MAKING FOR HIGHER SCORING

A UNITED PRESS SURVEY DISCLOSES SITUATION, SCORE COMPARISON MADE

MOST RECENT TEST MADE AT TOLEDO, O., WHERE BILL BURKE WON

By L. S. CAMERON
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, July 8.—The new balloon ball of United States golf makes for higher scoring by stars as well as by duffers, a United Press survey disclosed today.

A comparison was made of scores turned in for the last two Open championships, the most recent of which, held at Toledo, O., was won by Bill Burke of Greenwich, Conn. The 1931 championship was played over a 71-par course, while other recent Opens were held on courses with pars of 72.

The 30 leaders of 1931 required 9,012 for the 72 holes they played in the championship proper. The 30 leaders of the year before also used up 9,012 strokes, but, as pointed out, this year's course had a lower par.

The first 15 players of last year's championship who also played the first four rounds this year, had higher totals in 1931. These leading stars required 4,482 strokes in 1930, and 4,552 strokes in 1931, despite the fact that Inverness, scene of the 1931 championship, has a par of one stroke lower than that of Interlachen at Minneapolis, where the tournament was held last season.

By way of individual comparison, Mac Smith who was runner-up in 1930, scored 289 in that tournament, and 299 this year. Horton Smith had 292 last year, and 306 at Toledo. Harry Cooper, Johnny Golden and Tommy Armour, all had higher scores this year, especially Armour, who finished far back with 315.

Johnny Farrell had 292 each year. Bill Mehlhorn this year was four strokes below his 1930 total, and Leo Diegel was seven strokes below. Geo. Von Elm had 301 at Interlachen and 292 at Inverness. Bill Burke, who tied for 27th place last year, totalling 306, had 292 in tying Von Elm when the championship proper at Inverness was complete.

The U. S. G. A. should be glad of these results for the new ball was designed to eliminate inordinate distance and extreme low scoring. But the new ball continues to be highly unpopular with the duffer.

PAT SAWYER, DEFENDING CHAMP, IS ELIMINATED

LOSES IN 1ST ROUND OF MATCH PLAY OF STATE AMATEUR GOLF TOURNAMENT

LESTER BOLSTAD, MEDALIST, ST. PAUL, OVERCOMES PHIL HALVORSON

Minneapolis, Minn., July 8.—(U.P.)—Pat Sawyer, defending champion, was eliminated in the first round of the State Amateur Golf Tournament match play today by Allen Labatt, of Minneapolis, 2 up.

Other favorites survived first round play. Lester Bolstad, St. Paul, medalist and outstanding favorite of the tournament, easily overcame Phil Halvorson, Minneapolis, 4 and 2.

Dan J. Kennedy, Winnipeg, who tied with Sawyer for second place in the qualifying round, had little difficulty with Don Burris, Minneapolis. He won 4 and 3.

Labatt was expected to have comparatively easy sailing to get into the finals after his victory over Sawyer. In the upper bracket, however, Bolstad must meet Kennedy as well as a number of other low qualifying round scorers.

Other results of morning round matches included Ted Parker defeating Dave Grannis, 4 and 3; Lee Herron, beating Lynn Johnson, 7 and 5; Ade Fordham, besting Al Snell, 2 and 1; Stan Larson defeating Dick Putnam, 4 and 3; W. H. Forbes, Jr., downing Willy Taft, 3 and 2, and C. I. Long defeating B. Bergman, 4 and 3.

Play was halted several times today by intermittent showers. Pairings in the upper bracket for the afternoon round included Bolstad vs. Parker, Herron vs. Fordham, Larson vs. Forbes and Kennedy vs. Long.

The lower bracket matches may be postponed because of rain, it was said.

Odor of Food

If the odor of oil of lavender is agreeable to you, place a few drops of it in a bowl and leave on the dining room table. The aroma will refresh the atmosphere and counteract the effects of cooking odors coming from the kitchens.

An Easier Way

Dropping broken ice on clouds can produce rain, declares a scientist. But what's wrong with the much simpler method of cleaning the car?

FAN DIES OF HEART ATTACK AT BALL GAME

Chicago, July 8.—(U.P.)—Arthur Breiholz, Cornell, Ill., died of a heart attack after battling his way through the crowd yesterday to see the Chicago Cubs. About 15 other persons collapsed during the jam. Yesterday's crowd was larger than either of those that saw the two world series games between the Cubs and Athletics here in 1929.

ATHLETICS ARE HEADED FOR THE AMERICAN TITLE

WASHINGTON SENATORS KNOW IT WILL TAKE OVER SEVEN TEAMS TO STOP THEM

New York, July 8.—(U.P.)—The Washington Senators are just about convinced that it will take more than seven ball teams to keep the Philadelphia Athletics from winning their third consecutive American league pennant, particularly if Connie Mack lets George Earnshaw pitch as often as he wants to.

ROCKEFELLER SR. CELEBRATES HIS 92ND BIRTHDAY

THRIFT LED TO CREATION OF ONE OF WORLD'S LARGEST FORTUNES

FINANCIER LOOKS FORWARD TO OBSERVING HIS 100TH BIRTHDAY

(Copyright, 1931, by United Press)

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 8.—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., whose habit of saving pennies as a farm boy of eight down in Moravia, N. Y., led to creation of one of the world's largest fortunes, celebrated his 92nd birthday at his feudal manor in Pocantico Hills today, and looked forward to his 100th.

Twenty years ago when he turned over to his son control of the Standard Oil Corporation, a vast monopoly representing seven-eighths of the industry, he had achieved the success he desired in business. Now he is engaged, just as earnestly, in living to be 100.

"Why I'll live to be 100. I feel as well as I ever did. I'll even beat 100," he told a friend yesterday.

And in accordance with the rules of living which he has set for himself—rules from which he never deviates—he planned a simple celebration, different from any other day's routine only in the fact that members of the immediate family were present, and that there would be a birthday cake on the dinner table.

Shielded from the public in the privacy of his 8,000-acre estate by a small army of private policemen, he planned to breakfast, play numerica, golf his usual nine holes, nap after lunch, go for a drive before dinner, and pass out dimes.

He will not grant any interviews. His only public announcement was in the form of a statement which said:

"These occasions offer me a very welcome opportunity: first to express my gratitude to the many friends who not only at this time but throughout the year have shown their kindly regard for me, and second, to wish them and theirs and all the world a large measure of health and contentment, which are the basis of real happiness."

Rockefeller's day starts at 7 A. M., when his valet enters the room and, after filling his trouser pockets with dimes and nickels, awakens the master. The oil pioneer dresses, then starts his morning tour of the house and Japanese garden. To the servants he meets in the corridors he hands dimes. After his walk, a secretary reads him a digest of the world's news.

Promptly at 8 o'clock he joins the family and guests at breakfast, and asks the blessing. The meal is usually hearty, and at its conclusion a secretary reads passages from the Scriptures.

Numerica is played after breakfast. The game is a form of solitaire Rockefeller is expert. Those who beat him get a dime; others get nickels.

For an hour or two Rockefeller attends to business affairs, then comes the daily rite of golf. He shoots the nine holes in from 39 to 50. When his partners make good shots he gives them dimes.

The afternoon ride is usually in an open car, a sixteen-year-old automobile in which Rockefeller sits beside the chauffeur bundled up in a coat and muffler, even in hot weather.

It was unlikely he would venture outside his estate today. But within the high steel fences that skirt the estate he has many miles of roads over which to travel.

The Rockefeller manor is a self-sustaining "state," with its own fire department, police force (which, incidentally, is larger than the combined forces of both Tarrytown and North Tarrytown), laundry, dairy, and bakery, a striking contrast to the owner's boyhood home.

Guests at tonight's family dinner will be Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; John D. 3rd, Laurence S. Winthrop, David Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. David M. Milton, granddaughter and her husband, and their 3-year-old daughter, Abby.

Memories of Rockefeller's boyhood probably will be revived at that dinner as they were today by older residents of Moravia.

By the Moravia Village Common, old residents recalled the story of the oil king's first business transaction—in turkeys instead of petroleum.

He made his first money raising turkeys. He saw a turkey hen stealthily making for the woods, he trailed her. For days he hunted her nest. When he found it, he brought home the baby chicks and fed them with scraps his mother gave him. He sold them in the fall at the village market and the next year bought more hens, thus starting his first-money-making enterprise.

When John was 10 years old the family moved three miles east of Oswego. Here no farming was done but there was a garden across which was stretched a string, with one side for John and one for William to hoe. It was in that home that John on frosty autumn mornings when he went after the family cow would stand awhile to warm his bare feet on the spot where the cow had slept all night.

That was the early training Rockefeller received before going to Cleveland to start the career that made him millions.

Today the mire trail over which the little Rockefeller boy drove his turkeys is a state highway running from Auburn to Oswego, passing his three boyhood homes and named the Rockefeller highway in his honor.

BILLY BURKE WINS GOLF TITLE

N. E. COMES FROM BEHIND TO WIN

PUTS OVER WINNING RUN IN LAST INNING TO BEAT S. E. 8-7

Northeast won an uphill battle from Southeast in a close and hard-fought city league game last night, 8-7. Southeast was in the lead until the last inning when Northeast put over the tying and winning runs. Three errors by Southeast after one man was out lead to the downfall of Southeast. Art Holman flied to Fogelstrom in right field who dropped his fly ball and Holman went to second. Hegstad hit to Laitala at short who fumbled his grounder and Holman scored. Jarbo singled to bring home the winning run. Northeast used four pitchers to stop the Southeast hitters, G. Elling, A. Holman, Jarbo and Richmond doing the mound work, while Fogelstrom and Whitlock were on the mound for Southeast.

Thursday, South Side and Southeast meet in another league game. Lorrie Swanson, who has been laid up so far this season with a lame arm, will be on the mound for South Side, while L. Rofidal, who suffered a split finger in the Southeast game last week, will be on the receiving end.

The box score:

Northeast	Ab.	R.	H.	E.

Weds Brother's Rescuer

A romance which grew and blossomed over the rescue of a young Britisher entrapped in the Arctic wastes of Greenland had its culmination when the former Betty Courtauld, only daughter of Samuel Courtauld, millionaire manufacturer, married Capt. Ralph Raynor, of the Royal Corps Signals. Capt. Raynor organized the expedition which went to the rescue of Miss Courtauld's brother in Greenland. The newlyweds are shown leaving the church where they were married at Ralstead, Essex, England.

Edison 'Hero' to Aide of Inventor for 50 Years

William Meadowcroft, 77, Just Recovered From Serious Illness, Is Back On Job He's Filled For Half Century

Rare it is to find the kind of true and devoted service personified by William H. Meadowcroft in his half century of association with Thomas A. Edison as his confidential secretary. This pleasant white-haired man of 77 years has grown old in the trusted employ of the "Wizard of Menlo Park," the while he has been a distinguished developer of decorative electric lamps, the first to experiment with the X-ray and a contributor to developments with electric signs. Rare with employe and employer, too, is the light in which Mr. Meadowcroft holds the noted inventor. "They say no man is a hero to one who is close to him. But this is an exceptional case." Those are Mr. Meadowcroft's words and they aptly describe the type of devoted service which he has rendered throughout 50 years of loyalty.

ROCKEFELLER SR. CELEBRATES HIS 92ND BIRTHDAY

THRIFT LED TO CREATION OF ONE OF WORLD'S LARGEST FORTUNES

FINANCIER LOOKS FORWARD TO OBSERVING HIS 100TH BIRTHDAY

(Copyright, 1931, by United Press)

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 8.—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., whose habit of saving pennies as a farm boy of eight down in Moravia, N. Y., led to creation of one of the world's largest fortunes, celebrated his 92nd birthday at his feudal manor in Pocantico Hills today, and looked forward to his 100th.

Twenty years ago when he turned over to his son control of the Standard Oil Corporation, a vast monopoly representing seven-eighths of the industry, he had achieved the success he desired in business. Now he is engaged, just as earnestly, in living to be 100.

"Why I'll live to be 100. I feel as well as I ever did. I'll even beat 100," he told a friend yesterday.

And in accordance with the rules of living which he has set for himself—rules from which he never deviates—he planned a simple celebration, different from any other day's routine only in the fact that members of the immediate family were present, and that there would be a birthday cake on the dinner table.

Shielded from the public in the privacy of his 8,000-acre estate by a small army of private policemen, he planned to breakfast, play numerica, golf his usual nine holes, nap after lunch, go for a drive before dinner, and pass out dimes.

He will not grant any interviews. His only public announcement was in the form of a statement which said:

"These occasions offer me a very welcome opportunity: first to express my gratitude to the many friends who not only at this time but throughout the year have shown their kindly regard for me, and second, to wish them and theirs and all the world a large measure of health and contentment, which are the basis of real happiness."

Rockefeller's day starts at 7 A. M., when his valet enters the room and, after filling his trouser pockets with dimes and nickels, awakens the master. The oil pioneer dresses, then starts his morning tour of the house and Japanese garden. To the servants he meets in the corridors he hands dimes. After his walk, a secretary reads him a digest of the world's news.

Promptly at 8 o'clock he joins the family and guests at breakfast, and asks the blessing. The meal is usually hearty, and at its conclusion a secretary reads passages from the Scriptures.

Numerica is played after breakfast. The game is a form of solitaire Rockefeller is expert. Those who beat him get a dime; others get nickels.

For an hour or two Rockefeller attends to business affairs, then comes the daily rite of golf. He shoots the nine holes in from 39 to 50. When his partners make good shots he gives them dimes.

The afternoon ride is usually in an open car, a sixteen-year-old automobile in which Rockefeller sits beside the chauffeur bundled up in a coat and muffler, even in hot weather.

It was unlikely he would venture outside his estate today. But within the high steel fences that skirt the estate he has many miles of roads over which to travel.

The Rockefeller manor is a self-sustaining "state," with its own fire department, police force (which, incidentally, is larger than the combined forces of both Tarrytown and North Tarrytown), laundry, dairy, and bakery, a striking contrast to the owner's boyhood home.

Guests at tonight's family dinner will be Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; John D. 3rd, Laurence S. Winthrop, David Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. David M. Milton, granddaughter and her husband, and their 3-year-old daughter, Abby.

Memories of Rockefeller's boyhood probably will be revived at that dinner as they were today by older residents of Moravia.

By the Moravia Village Common, old residents recalled the story of the oil king's first business transaction—in turkeys instead of petroleum.

He made his first money raising turkeys. He saw a turkey hen stealthily making for the woods, he trailed her. For days he hunted her nest. When he found it, he brought home the baby chicks and fed them with scraps his mother gave him. He sold them in the fall at the village market and the next year bought more hens, thus starting his first-money-making enterprise.

When John was 10 years old the family moved three miles east of Oswego. Here no farming was done but there was a garden across which was stretched a string, with one side for John and one for William to hoe. It was in that home that John on frosty autumn mornings when he went after the family cow would stand awhile to warm his bare feet on the spot where the cow had slept all night.

That was the early training Rockefeller received before going to Cleveland to start the career that made him millions.

Today the mire trail over which the little Rockefeller boy drove his turkeys is a state highway running from Auburn to Oswego, passing his three boyhood homes and named the Rockefeller highway in his honor.

N. E. COMES FROM BEHIND TO WIN

PUTS OVER WINNING RUN IN LAST INNING TO BEAT S. E. 8-7

Northeast won an uphill battle from Southeast in a close and hard-fought city league game last night, 8-7. Southeast was in the lead until the last inning when Northeast put over the tying and winning runs. Three errors by Southeast after one man was out lead to the downfall of Southeast. Art Holman flied to Fogelstrom in right field who dropped his fly ball and Holman went to second. Hegstad hit to Laitala at short who fumbled his grounder and Holman scored. Jarbo singled to bring home the winning run. Northeast used four pitchers to stop the Southeast hitters, G. Elling, A. Holman, Jarbo and Richmond doing the mound work, while Fogelstrom and Whitlock were on the mound for Southeast.

Thursday, South Side and Southeast meet in another league game. Lorrie Swanson, who has been laid up so far this season with a lame arm, will be on the mound for South Side, while L. Rofidal, who suffered a split finger in the Southeast game last week, will be on the receiving end.

The box score:

TO INCREASE MEN ON HIGHWAY WORK

100 Men to Work on Grading; Contract Calls for Completion by November 1

APPROACHES TO CITY CLEARED

Preparations Start for Building Road Over Northeast Brainerd Swamp; 25 Men Now Working

The 25 men now employed on the grubbing and clearing work for the new route of State Trunk Highway No. 2 through this section will be enlarged to 100 men by next month when grading work will be underway full blast, it was learned here today.

Grading of the highway will be completed by November according to contract between the state and Barnard Curtis Co., Minneapolis.

At the present time workmen are blasting stumps and clearing the approaches of the highway to the city. Preparations were underway today also to build the roadway over the swamp at the east end of A street N. E.

One half million yards of dirt excavation will be dumped as a foundation of the new highway, 9.9 miles.

Sub contractors include Wm. Mead, Ole Martinson and Axel Olin.

When the grading work is completed the Minnesota Highway Department will call for gravelling work.

Summer Gospel Rally at Mildred Arranged

The regular Summer Bible Conference and Gospel and Missionary Rally of the Northern Gospel Mission is to be held at Mildred, Minn., July 23 to August 2.

This camp gathering has been the center of considerable interest for a number of years past, and a good interest and attendance is expected this year. The difficulties encountered a year ago from impassable highways have been eliminated this year, and free access to the grounds will be possible. Friends of the Northern Gospel Mission are familiar with the plans of these meetings which are held in a tent. Guests of the camp are lodged under roof and all meals are served on the grounds without fixed charge. Free offerings are accepted.

An interesting program of gospel services, connected Bible Study and Missionary meetings is planned and expected this year. The afternoon services, after the first Sunday, are given to connected Bible Study. The announcement that this year Mr. Welliver, the Director of the Mission, will teach on Prophecy is expected to arouse some extra interest.

All Missionaries of the Northern Gospel Mission expect to be present at the Conference. Foreign Mission representatives also will speak, including Miss Irena Wenholz of North Africa, who went out to the Foreign Mission Field from Northern Minnesota. John Mac. T. Carson of Duluth and Peter MacFarlene of St. Paul are expected as speakers. Representatives of the Gospel Missionary Union of Kansas City, an affiliated Society, are expected to be present and have part. The work of the Mission is strictly evangelical and entirely free from what is known as "Modernism."

As a special feature for this year, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Gabriel of Duluth have been engaged to have charge of the music. Those who have heard them occasionally at previous conferences will be interested in this feature.

Service hours, daily except Sunday are: 9:30 a. m., 3 and 8 p. m.; Sunday, 10:30 a. m., 2 and 8 p. m. Besides these, the regular Sunday school and children's services will be held at hours to be announced.

RELIEF CAN BE HAD FROM WEEDS

State Provides for Highway Department Destroying Weeds Along Right of Way

Farmers living adjacent to state trunk highways have access to relief from obnoxious weeds growing along the right of way by reporting the condition to the Minnesota Highway Department.

The department is required to remove any obnoxious weeds.

Similar rule exists where obnoxious weeks grow along county highways. Maintenance men of the County Highway Department will correct the condition when it is reported to the county department.

Where weeds grow along the right of way of township roads, the farmers adjacent to the road are responsible.

Railways also are required to keep their right of ways free from obnoxious weeds.

CHARGE PURPORTED PLOT AGAINST FASCISTS

Rome, July 8.—(U.P.)—An effort to connect the Abione Cattolica with a purported plot against the fascist regime in Italy caused added concern today in the controversy between the Catholic church and the government.

The fascist organ, Il Lavoro Fascista, charged that Don Sturzo, a Sicilian-Greek, said to have been a former power in Italian politics, plotted to overthrow fascism.

The newspaper openly declared that Sturzo attempted to enlist the aid of the Catholic Action society (Azione Cattolica, a laymen's organization) in his plot.

It was admitted that Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, disapproved of the scheme.

TAKES MEASURES FOR PROTECTION OF GERMAN CREDIT

PRESIDENT HINDENBURG ISSUES AN EMERGENCY DECREE

TO LEVY ON ALL IMPORTANT BUSINESS CONCERNS FOR GUARANTEES

By FREDERICK KUH
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Berlin, July 8.—President Paul Von Hindenburg issued an emergency decree today levying on all important business concerns for guarantees to protect German credit.

The decree, issued under article 48 of the constitution, empowers the government to impose on all business concerns having property exceeding 5,000,000 marks ($1,190,000) in value, proportionate guarantees up to a maximum of 50,000,000 marks for debts of the Reich gold discount bank and contracts for the protection of German credit.

The bank of industrial debentures, established under the Dawes plan, may act as trustee of the guarantee fund.

The decree legalizes last night's offer of leading German firms to guarantee a credit up to 500,000,000 marks ($119,000,000) for the Reich's debts.

Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reachsbank, will go to London soon to negotiate a new large loan for the Reichsbank, part of which will be secured by German industrial and financial houses, it was learned today.

Rumors connected the projected loan with the Reichsbank's plan to obtain $400,000,000 or $500,000,000 in credit fo rthe gold discount bank, a Reichsbank subsidiary.

About a quarter of the proposed credit will be guaranteed by 1,000 German industrial and financial houses in Germany, according to a plan just announced.

DENIES HE DROVE CAR IN RECKLESS FASHION

Frank Prosser denied in municipal court today the charge that yesterday he drove his automobile in a zigzagging course nor was he careless or reckless in driving on State Trunk Highway No. 2 two miles west of Brainerd.

The complaint was made by A. J. Cornell, officer of the Minnesota Highway Patrol.

On the request of oCunty Attorney Arthur J. Sullivan the trial was set by Judge J. H. Warner for next Tuesday at 10 a. m. Bonds were provided.

FAMOUS FLIERS TO COME FOR MEET

Holders of World's Records for Outside Loops to Perform Here

12 PLANES SCHEDULED

Air Carnival Saturday and Sunday Sponsored by Legion Post

Brainerd will become a air center of the state Saturday and Sunday, July 11 and 12 when the Belle Fourche Air Lines present an air carnival under auspices of the American Legion of this city at the Rosko Airport.

Twelve planes will be circling about the city and lake country as promised by the Air Lines and in addition several independent owners will bring planes here for the two days.

The flight will include one Ford trimotor passenger ship.

Heading the list of air entertainers will be Tex Rankin and Dorothy Hestor, holders of world records for outside loops for men and women respectively.

The two will perform stunts that have made them famous. Miss Hestor will engage in stunt flying at the National Air Races at Cleveland later this season. She is the first woman flier ever put on the national races program.

Rankin is now participating in the air meet at Seattle and plans to fly direct from there to reach this city July 10.

He will do a series of barrell rolls, falling leafs and other dangerous stunts of the air.

Clyde W. Ice, manager of the Air Lines, will pilot the tri-motor. He has had more than 8,000 hours in the air.

E. C. Else, advance man, was arranging details for the meet here today.

RIVERTON YOUTH GETS LIFE TERM

Gillespie Pleads Guilty to Slaying of Cafe Patron; Partner Also Sentenced

Clarence Gillespie, 20, Riverton started today a life sentence at Stillwater penitentary for the slaying of Charles Welch, Superior, in a Carlton cafe June 17.

Welch, a patron of the cafe, was shot down as Welch and Ed. Foster, Chippewa Falls, Wis., engaged in a gun battle with officers of the law who came to the restaurant to arrest them on charges of burglary.

Gillespie plead guilty to second degree murder, third degree burglary and first degree assault.

Foster plead guilty to third degree murder, burglary and assault and was sentenced to an indeterminate term at Stillwater.

The gun battle also ended in the wounding of Gillespie and Frank McFarland, Carlton marshal. Both have recovered.

BRINGS NEW PLAYS

Christy Obrecht and his company will open a week's engagement in Brainerd next Monday night, July 13 in their new waterproof tent located at the corner of 6th and Oak streets. "Christy" is returning to Brainerd this season with all new plays, new people, new scenery and lighting effects, in fact everything new but the name is what the theatre-goers can look forward to for the coming week's engagement of this popular company. The opening play Monday night will be "Poor Relation" a new modern comedy in three acts. Ladies will be admitted free Monday night only when accompanied with one paid adult ticket. The prices are popular.

WEATHER BETTERS COUNTY GRAINS

Indications Are That County Will Benefit by Good Crop This Season

Benefitted by perfect growing weather, a few hot days, then milder, intermittent showers, Crow Wing county will have a good crop this year in the opinion of E. G. Roth, county agent.

In contrast to last summer at this time when the heat stunted the kernels of grains, all grains are heading out in fine manner. Corn is particularly progressing and a bumper crop for this county is looked for.

Reporting the most favorable outlook on crops are the following townships, Long Lake, Daggett Brook, Garrison, Maple Grove, Nokay Lake, Oak Lawn, St. Mathias, Platte, Roosevelt and Crow Wing.

In direct contrast to the progress of the crops in Minnesota are the adjacent states to the west where the heat has parched the majority of crops, killed hundreds of head of cattle and caused a water panic among the farmers due to lack of moisture.

WAR DEBT CONFERENCE IN LONDON SOON

INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL EXPERTS ARE TO CONVENE FIRST

COMMITTEE OF STATESMEN TO CONFER A WEEK LATER

London, July 8.—(U.P.)—The leading powers concerned in the Hoover moratorium have indicated their acceptance of the British government's invitation to a conference here.

It was expected a committee of international financial experts would convene next Monday and a committee of statesmen a week later. Between them, they will work out the technical details necessary for putting the Hoover accord, as accepted by Paris, into effect.

The conference was considered likely to center largely around the guarantee fund of 25,000,000 pounds sterling which France undertook to reserve to cover the former war allies in the event of a German moratorium. The guarantee was in exchange for the allies' concession that France receive 25,000,000 pounds sterling in unconditional payments instead of 15,000,000 pounds to which it was entitled by virtue of the Young plan.

Because the Hoover plan, by suspending all payments, automatically obviated the possibility of the Germans giving 90 days' notice of a moratorium for one year, it was generally considered there was no point in raising the guarantee fund question at present, as France urged.

It was understood that recent allusions by Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, in the house of commons, to the effect that "Britain makes no further sacrifices," referred to the British attitude which might be expected in the event that the guarantee fund was discussed by the conference. It was emphasized that when the Allies granted France's request for a major part of the unconditional payments at The Hague, only 5,000,000 pounds sterling remained to be distributed to the other Allies, of which the British share was roughly 2,750,000 pounds instead of the previously allotted Young plan share of 22 per cent, which equalled more than 7,000,000 pounds.

Britain claimed that her willingness to sacrifice the difference, more than 5,000,000 pounds, held good as long as the French guarantee fund was effective for the event that the Germans might claim a moratorium.

In view of belief that the Hoover plan in no wise altered conditions of the Young plan, however, the British consider that there is no reason why the plan should influence the guarantee fund, which they say was entirely formed from money foregone by Britain and the other Allies in favor of France.

IMPROVED METHOD OF ROASTING COFFEE IMPRESSES CRITICS

Controlled Roasting Creates Definitely Superior Flavor in Hills Bros. Coffee

Critical people, who search for a perfect coffee, usually come to their journey's end when they taste Hills Bros. Coffee! It has a flavor no other coffee has—a flavor none can equal! This is because of Controlled Roasting—Hills Bros.' patented process. It keeps Hills Bros. Coffee free from the unsatisfactory flavor-results so often secured with ordinary, bulk methods.

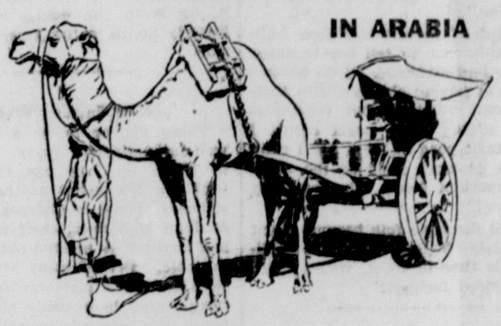

As the accuracy of the hour-glass depends upon an even, continuous flow . . . a little at a time . . . so the matchless, unvarying flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee is produced by this patented process that roasts evenly, continuously . . . a little at a time.

Here's what happens: every berry is roasted to the right degree. None is underdone, none is overdone. As a result, Hills Bros. Coffee has the perfect flavor that never varies! Drink Hills Bros. today. You'll delight in its savory flavor. And that flavor is always the same—it never varies!

Hills Bros. Coffee is packed in vacuum cans. Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is removed and kept out of these cans. Ordinary, "air-tight" cans won't keep coffee fresh. But Hills Bros. Coffee is always fresh! Order some today. Ask for it by name, and look for the Arab trade-mark on the can.

CAMEL POWER MAKES THE WHEELS GO 'ROUND IN ARABIA

IF you were a native of Aden, Arabia, you would be familiar with camel carts . . . conveyances that are common there. You probably would know little about automobiles, telephones and other modern conveniences common in America.

What we call the standard of living varies in different countries. A camel cart would be out of place in our midwestern cities . . . an average native with a telephone would be an oddity in Arabia . . . and his telephone would not be worth much to him because none of his friends, relatives or business associates have telephones.

In America, there are more than 20,000,000 telephones; one for each six persons. Telephones are so common that it is the usual thing to look in the telephone directory to find where someone lives or where a business is located. Most of the persons you know have telephones and use them several times daily, whenever they want to talk with anyone either blocks or miles away. Telephone service enters into every phase of American life.

People in the United States have telephone service because with it they can talk with almost anyone at any time . . . because with it they can call help instantly in any emergency . . . because their friends and relatives have telephones . . . because it is worth so much more to them than the few cents a day it costs.

This Company's desire is to provide telephone service which is satisfactory to its customers in every way . . . its aim is to continually make service better and more valuable to each person who uses it.

TO INCREASE MEN ON HIGHWAY WORK

100 Men to Work on Grading; Contract Calls for Completion by November 1

APPROACHES TO CITY CLEARED

Preparations Start for Building Road Over Northeast Brainerd Swamp; 25 Men Now Working

The 25 men now employed on the grubbing and clearing work for the new route of State Trunk Highway No. 2 through this section will be enlarged to 100 men by next month when grading work will be underway full blast, it was learned here today.

Grading of the highway will be completed by November according to contract between the state and Barnard Curtis Co., Minneapolis.

At the present time workmen are blasting stumps and clearing the approaches of the highway to the city. Preparations were underway today also to build the roadway over the swamp at the east end of A street N. E.

One half million yards of dirt excavation will be dumped as a foundation of the new highway, 9.9 miles.

Sub contractors include Wm. Mead, Ole Martinson and Axel Olin.

When the grading work is completed the Minnesota Highway Department will call for gravelling work.

Summer Gospel Rally at Mildred Arranged

The regular Summer Bible Conference and Gospel and Missionary Rally of the Northern Gospel Mission is to be held at Mildred, Minn., July 23 to August 2.

This camp gathering has been the center of considerable interest for a number of years past, and a good interest and attendance is expected this year. The difficulties encountered a year ago from impassable highways have been eliminated this year, and free access to the grounds will be possible. Friends of the Northern Gospel Mission are familiar with the plans of these meetings which are held in a tent. Guests of the camp are lodged under roof and all meals are served on the grounds without fixed charge. Free offerings are accepted.

An interesting program of gospel services, connected Bible Study and Missionary meetings is planned and expected this year. The afternoon services, after the first Sunday, are given to connected Bible Study. The announcement that this year Mr. Welliver, the Director of the Mission, will teach on Prophecy is expected to arouse some extra interest.

All Missionaries of the Northern Gospel Mission expect to be present at the Conference. Foreign Mission representatives also will speak, including Miss Irena Wenholz of North Africa, who went out to the Foreign Mission Field from Northern Minnesota. John Mac. T. Carson of Duluth and Peter MacFarlene of St. Paul are expected as speakers. Representatives of the Gospel Missionary Union of Kansas City, an affiliated Society, are expected to be present and have part. The work of the Mission is strictly evangelical and entirely free from what is known as "Modernism."

As a special feature for this year, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Gabriel of Duluth have been engaged to have charge of the music. Those who have heard them occasionally at previous conferences will be interested in this feature.

Service hours, daily except Sunday are: 9:30 a. m., 3 and 8 p. m.; Sunday, 10:30 a. m., 2 and 8 p. m. Besides these, the regular Sunday school and children's services will be held at hours to be announced.

RELIEF CAN BE HAD FROM WEEDS

State Provides for Highway Department Destroying Weeds Along Right of Way

Farmers living adjacent to state trunk highways have access to relief from obnoxious weeds growing along the right of way by reporting the condition to the Minnesota Highway Department.

The department is required to remove any obnoxious weeds.

Similar rule exists where obnoxious weeks grow along county highways. Maintenance men of the County Highway Department will correct the condition when it is reported to the county department.

Where weeds grow along the right of way of township roads, the farmers adjacent to the road are responsible.

Railways also are required to keep their right of ways free from obnoxious weeds.

CHARGE PURPORTED PLOT AGAINST FASCISTS

Rome, July 8.—(U.P.)—An effort to connect the Abione Cattolica with a purported plot against the fascist regime in Italy caused added concern today in the controversy between the Catholic church and the government.

The fascist organ, Il Lavoro Fascista, charged that Don Sturzo, a Sicilian-Greek, said to have been a former power in Italian politics, plotted to overthrow fascism.

The newspaper openly declared that Sturzo attempted to enlist the aid of the Catholic Action society (Azione Cattolica, a laymen's organization) in his plot.

It was admitted that Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, disapproved of the scheme.

Saturday evening, June 27, the Deerwood 4-H Club held a regular meeting. There were 48 members and 20 visitors present. After the meeting, a number of entertainments were enjoyed by all, and later in the evening, lunch was served. Sunday, June 28, Deerwood 4-H club played a game of kittenball with Mission 4-H club and won with a score of 31 to 9 in their favor.

On Saturday, June 20, the Pine Tree Stickers 4-H Club had an ice cream social, which was a great success. In spite of the cold evening a large crowd turned out. The men played Horseshoe, while the younger generation played games. The proceeds of the social amounted to $18.30.

On Tuesday, June 16, the Pine Tree Stickers 4-H club gave a play at the Farm Bureau meeting. The play was called, "Wanted a Wife."

Your Turn Now

If you have a bit of news
Send it in,
Or a joke that will amuse
Send it in.
A story that is true,
We want to hear from you—
Send it in.
Never mind about the style,
If the news is worth while,
It may help or cause a smile,
Send it in.

HE KNEW

He had proposed. She tossed her head haughtily.

"You!" came her scornful reply. "You want to marry me!"

"Yes," murmured the lover.

"But, my dear boy," she went on, you've only known me three days."

"O, much longer than that really!" he said. "I've been two years in the bank where your father has his account."

A Bid for Notice

"They tell me you have discovered an underworld down to Goldurn Corners."

"Yep, answered Farmer Corntossel. "You ought to see the people that stop to look us over."

"What are you doin'? Reformin'?"

"No. Advertisin'." — Washington Star.

YEARS TOO LATE

Old Stager—I hear you have the part representing young Giddyboy open in your new play. I hope I'm not too late for the place?

Manager—Sorry, but you look about forty years too late.

The Perfect Pest

A guy I hate
Is Hank O'Keefe;
He's always saying,
"Okay, Chief."

His Inspiration

"To what do you owe your success?" asked the reporter of the multimillionaire.

"To my wife's determination that she was going to have better clothes, better and more cars and a finer house than any of the neighbors," he sighed.

A Husky Favorite

"How is your boy doing at college?"

"Well," replied Farmer Corntossel, "I don't s'pose he's much fur Greek an' Latin, but they do tell me he's mighty highly considered by the boys when they have a little job o' hazin' on hand."—Washington Star.

Most Trying Child

Little John—Mummy, do people who try hard get on?

Mother—Of course they do, dear, but why?

Little John—Well, nurse says I'm the most trying child she's ever come across.

Words in Demand

"Your constituents seem to expect a great deal of explaining."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "It's the first time in years that they have wanted me to talk instead of shake hands."—Washington Star.

FALSE REPORT

First Chorus Girl—What do you think of that report about her hair.

Second Chorus Girl—False.

Ideal

The useful potato
All housewives adore;
No seeds to get rid of
And never a core.

Not Quite 100 Per Cent

The man who bought a a second-hand car tok it back. "What's the matter with it?" asked the seller.

"Well, you see," said the owner, "every part of it makes a noise except the horn!

Shining Up the Recipe

Mr. Younghub (starting on his dessert)—Strange flavor to this sauce; tastes like furniture polish.

Wife—I did put in a little, dear—you see, it's cabinet pudding.

He's Smart

A fur expert can look at an otter skin and tell what kind of a cat used to wear it.—Florida Times-Union.

Hanako's Holiday

Little Hanako Tanako opened her eyes slowly. She raised her black head from the wooden pillow and stared at the sunlight coming through the paper walls.

She rolled quickly out of bed, which was made of soft quilts piled on the floor. She put on her gayest, brightest kimono with big red flowers on it, her white stockings which had places made for the big toes, and she slipped her feet into her red sandals.

"Good morning, little one," said a gentle voice as her mother came into the room. "We are glad that honorable sun most kindly shines upon this great day of dolls." Mrs. Tanako pushed back the sliding walls and let the sunshine and the playful breezes of March pour into the room.

"Now may we have the beautiful steps?" Hanako asked after she had eaten her breakfast. She watched eagerly as her mother took out of a big chest five steps covered with red silk. At the top of the steps she placed a dazzling golden screen.

"Here come most honorable emperor and empress," said Hanako, taking two dolls from her mother's hand.

Hanako placed each royal doll on the top step in front of the golden screen.

"Next come the ladies-in-waiting," said Hanako. She arranged the three dolls in their bright kimonos on the step below the royal family.

"Here are the orange and cherry trees which are like the trees at the gate of the royal palace," said her mother.

Hanako put the gay little trees at each end of the third step, with a royal sentinel beside them. In between them she placed the court musicians who were seated cross-legged on soft cushions.

"Now we prepare the fourth step," counted Hanako with a happy smile. For a whole year she had waited to see again all these beautiful dolls, for these were the special dolls which were used only on the day of the Doll Festival, when every little Japanese girl had a holiday.

Later the boys would have their holiday, when queer paper fishes would fly from tall poles and the boys would fly kites and have kite races.

"We now greet the three coolie dolls," said Hanako as she placed them on the fourth step. They were dressed in plainer clothes and carried brooms and brushes to show that they did the household work. Then came a little platform holding some doll actors who were giving a play.

At dinner time there was company and Mrs. Tanako's little maid servant heaped trays with good things to put before the guests. There were hot soups which every one drank, and blue and white bowls full of rice. There was golden brown fish served with preserved apricots, green chrysanthemum leaves in yellow batter, and bamboo shoots and mushrooms dipped in custard, and of course every one used chopsticks.

After dinner Hanako went visiting other little girls all up and down the street, and she carried gifts for them in her kimono sleeves.

"Alas, the smiling sun is going far away," said Hanako, as the third day of March ended. "The most beautiful dolls must go again into the big chest. Of all Doll Festivals this has been best." She cuddled down into her quilts.

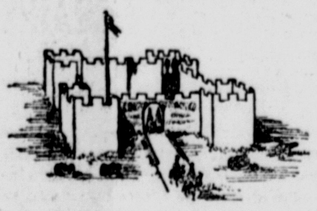

How to Build Your Fortress

1. A soft wood box about 19 inches by 13 inches is used for the main part, and a similar one is cut up for the turrets at the four corners.

2. Tools you will need are: a coping saw, chisels, a small cross-cut saw, plane, hammer, assorted nails, sharp knife, a pencil and ruler.

3. Pieces are cut in the parapet with coping saw and knife and are 1 inch long and ¾ inch high.

4. The platforms inside turrets, for soldiers to stand on, are 2 inches down from the top. Small ladders can reach from the floor to platforms.

5. Two doors, each 2 inches wide by 4 inches high, are placed on hinges and open inward.

6. The drawbridge can be made of several pieces of wood called slats, and can have small chains (obtained at ten-cent stores) to raise and lower it.

7. The fortress should be painted a gray color.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the cup to the saucer, "Did you see that child nick me with her spoon last evening? It makes me feel uncomfortable."

"Yes," answered the saucer, "I know just how you feel. Why yesterday that same child dropped ME! Such carelessness! Why can't people realize that we lose our beauty when we are nicked or cracked?"

"Oh, but Mr. China Cup and Miss Saucer, did you notice how dirty Jack's hands were at lunch today? He hid them in his lap most of the time so his mother wouldn't see them. Why, I would lose the pretty flowers with which I am decorated before I would come to the table as dirty as that!" contributed the plate.

"Ump," scolded the silver knife in indignant tones, "I have never been so mortified in my life as yesterday when Harry actually carried a piece of meat to his mouth with me and put me IN! Can you imagine such rudeness?"

"Well, you are not the only ones who have trouble with these careless humans," spoke the apple, which with the oranges and nuts, filled the bowl

in the center of the table. "Jane was told by her mother to wash me clean before I was put in here for eating and all she did was to hold me under the faucet for a minute. Just as though that would clean me! Why I need a good scrubbing before I am fit to eat. If only those children could see all the people who handle me before I am delivered at their door, they would surely be more careful. One day last week Jack took a brother apple to school. He threw it away before it was half eaten. Such wastefulness! I wonder if he knew that many boys and girls would have been glad to have had an apple to eat? What have you to say about how you are treated, Mr. Orange?"

"I have a great deal," answered the orange in an injured tone. "Boys and girls never can remember to throw my peelings in a garbage can. They drop them on the sidewalks and lawn. Then grown-ups talk about how horrid orange peelings look! Of course they do, when thrown about any place."

"You aren't any more abused than I am," pouted the bowl of cereal. "From the fuss boys and girls make about eating me, anyone would think my taste unpleasant. It isn't, and I am one of the best foods they can eat if they ever expect to grow up strong and well. Their mothers cook me so nicely, too."

The dish of dessert had been waiting all this time to tell her troubles. She now had a chance. "I do become so tired of having children skip their good meat, potatoes and vegetables just to satisfy their sweet tooth. I know I taste good to them, but I can't do them as much good as the other more important foods. Oh, here they come now!"

And all the table folk became silent immediately—hoping that the children, this time at least, would spare their injured feelings.

The Drawing Lesson

The Daisy

What funny thing is this I see?
A little turtle it MIGHT be;
Oh, no, it is a daisy flower—
But what can make her look so "sour?"

And so I ask her, "Why so sad?
A daisy should look gay and glad."

She says: "I'll whisper in your ear,
A fallen petal is a tear;

"I weep because I soon must die,
And that's enough to make me cry."
"Oh, yes," I say, "but while you live
A smile much happiness would give."

So now she smiles a smile at me,
And turns her sweet face UP, you see,
A daisy really should be gay,
Though she can live but one short day.

Test of Music

"There is only one critical judgment I can rely upon in music—the verdict of the spine," Fritz Kreisler told me. "If I feel a thrill down my spine, from my own work or that of any other man, I know that it is good. Let the critics say what they will. There is no finer test. And if an artist never knows that thrill, or loses it, he is in the wrong business."—Beverly Smith in the American Magazine.

Hair Turning White

There appear to be a number of well-authenticated cases on record in which the hair has turned gray within a few hours as the result of sickness, fright, or distress. The case of John M. Driver, clergyman, writer and lecturer, is pointed out as a good example. Driver many times stated from the public platform that his hair turned gray in a single night as the result of a domestic tragedy.

Crow Wing County 4H Club News

E. G. ROTH, County Agent

GERTRUDE ANDERSON, Club Agent

Miss Gertrude Anderson, County Club Agent, has met with the following 4-H clubs:

Oak Lawn Boosters 4-H Club met at the home of Henry Congdon on Wednesday, July 1, at 2:00 p. m. Two sewing teams gave very interesting demonstrations. Vera Congdon and Hortense McKay gave a demonstration on comfortable feet, and Genevieve Liners and Ethel McCulloch gave a demonstration on pajama pillows. After the meeting, Mrs. Congdon served lunch to all.

Dean Lake 4H- Club held their meeting at Homer Wells' home on Thursday, July 2 at 9:00 a. m. Ward Wells and Helen Wenzel gave a fish canning demonstration.

Ross Lake 4-H Club met at George Moritz's home on July 2 at 2:00 p. m. Frances Moritz gave a cake demonstration.

Dykeman 4-H Club held their meeting at the home of Ernest Persson on July 3 at 9:00 a. m. A good business session was held, and demonstrations were planned such as cake and bread baking, and a sewing demonstration on removing lettering from flour sacks.

The members of the Oak Hill 4-H Club met at Ray Cook's on July 3 at 2:00 p. m. Mrs. Rene Magnan took charge of the meeting. Several songs were sung, and the club planned to attend the Local Achievement Day that is to be held at Steve Tougas' Monday, July 13, at 9:00 a. m., together with the St. Mathias and Daggett Brook 4-H Club.

Miller Lake 4-H Club had a meeting at Geo. McCalvy's home on July 6 at 9:00 a. m. After a business session Norman Anderson gave his cake demonstration, and the club planned a picnic for Sunday, August 2.

A big time is planned for July 15 at which time the Deerwood, Shirt Lake Pine Tree Stickers, Crosby-Ironton and Klondike Klickers 4-H clubs and other clubs perhaps will hold their Local Achievement day. Demonstrations are to begin at 8:00 a. m. at Mrs. E. C. Henrickson's home. A picnic dinner will be served at the Tourist park at noon. Free coffee, lemonade and ice cream will be served to all, and any club is invited to attend. After dinner each club will be called on for a stunt. The kittenball captain, Donald Nesheim, has planned two games of kittenball, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. The two visiting teams will play in the morning, and Deerwood will play the winning team in the afternoon. Crosby-Ironton 4-H Club will give two demonstrations, one in Home Beautification and the other in Gardening. Plans for this Achievement Day were made at a meeting which was held on June 23. The following Junior Leaders gave talks on how they would help make July 15 a day to be remembered in Deerwood: Elsie Mae Currier, Lois Blomberg, Robert Graham, Violet Simonson.

The following committee was appointed to meet with the commercial club to complete arrangements: R. C. Roth, Mrs. Julius Splettstoeszer and Mrs. R. R. Graham.

Saturday evening, June 27, the Deerwood 4-H Club held a regular meeting. There were 48 members and 20 visitors present. After the meeting, a number of entertainments were enjoyed by all, and later in the evening, lunch was served. Sunday, June 28, Deerwood 4-H club played a game of kittenball with Mission 4-H club and won with a score of 31 to 9 in their favor.

On Saturday, June 20, the Pine Tree Stickers 4-H Club had an ice cream social, which was a great success. In spite of the cold evening a large crowd turned out. The men played Horseshoe, while the younger generation played games. The proceeds of the social amounted to $18.30.

On Tuesday, June 16, the Pine Tree Stickers 4-H club gave a play at the Farm Bureau meeting. The play was called, "Wanted a Wife."

Your Turn Now

If you have a bit of news
Send it in,
Or a joke that will amuse
Send it in.
A story that is true,
We want to hear from you—
Send it in.
Never mind about the style,
If the news is worth while,
It may help or cause a smile,
Send it in.

HE KNEW

He had proposed. She tossed her head haughtily.

"You!" came her scornful reply. "You want to marry me!"

"Yes," murmured the lover.

"But, my dear boy," she went on, you've only known me three days."

"O, much longer than that really!" he said. "I've been two years in the bank where your father has his account."

A Bid for Notice

"They tell me you have discovered an underworld down to Goldurn Corners."

"Yep, answered Farmer Corntossel. "You ought to see the people that stop to look us over."

"What are you doin'? Reformin'?"

"No. Advertisin'." — Washington Star.

YEARS TOO LATE

Old Stager—I hear you have the part representing young Giddyboy open in your new play. I hope I'm not too late for the place?

Manager—Sorry, but you look about forty years too late.

The Perfect Pest

A guy I hate
Is Hank O'Keefe;
He's always saying,
"Okay, Chief."

His Inspiration

"To what do you owe your success?" asked the reporter of the multimillionaire.

"To my wife's determination that she was going to have better clothes, better and more cars and a finer house than any of the neighbors," he sighed.

A Husky Favorite

"How is your boy doing at college?"

"Well," replied Farmer Corntossel, "I don't s'pose he's much fur Greek an' Latin, but they do tell me he's mighty highly considered by the boys when they have a little job o' hazin' on hand."—Washington Star.

Most Trying Child

Little John—Mummy, do people who try hard get on?

Mother—Of course they do, dear, but why?

Little John—Well, nurse says I'm the most trying child she's ever come across.

Words in Demand

"Your constituents seem to expect a great deal of explaining."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "It's the first time in years that they have wanted me to talk instead of shake hands."—Washington Star.

FALSE REPORT

First Chorus Girl—What do you think of that report about her hair.

Second Chorus Girl—False.

Ideal

The useful potato
All housewives adore;
No seeds to get rid of
And never a core.

Not Quite 100 Per Cent

The man who bought a a second-hand car tok it back. "What's the matter with it?" asked the seller.

"Well, you see," said the owner, "every part of it makes a noise except the horn!

Shining Up the Recipe

Mr. Younghub (starting on his dessert)—Strange flavor to this sauce; tastes like furniture polish.

Wife—I did put in a little, dear—you see, it's cabinet pudding.

He's Smart

A fur expert can look at an otter skin and tell what kind of a cat used to wear it.—Florida Times-Union.

Hanako's Holiday

Little Hanako Tanako opened her eyes slowly. She raised her black head from the wooden pillow and stared at the sunlight coming through the paper walls.

She rolled quickly out of bed, which was made of soft quilts piled on the floor. She put on her gayest, brightest kimono with big red flowers on it, her white stockings which had places made for the big toes, and she slipped her feet into her red sandals.

"Good morning, little one," said a gentle voice as her mother came into the room. "We are glad that honorable sun most kindly shines upon this great day of dolls." Mrs. Tanako pushed back the sliding walls and let the sunshine and the playful breezes of March pour into the room.

"Now may we have the beautiful steps?" Hanako asked after she had eaten her breakfast. She watched eagerly as her mother took out of a big chest five steps covered with red silk. At the top of the steps she placed a dazzling golden screen.

"Here come most honorable emperor and empress," said Hanako, taking two dolls from her mother's hand.

Hanako placed each royal doll on the top step in front of the golden screen.

"Next come the ladies-in-waiting," said Hanako. She arranged the three dolls in their bright kimonos on the step below the royal family.

"Here are the orange and cherry trees which are like the trees at the gate of the royal palace," said her mother.

Hanako put the gay little trees at each end of the third step, with a royal sentinel beside them. In between them she placed the court musicians who were seated cross-legged on soft cushions.

"Now we prepare the fourth step," counted Hanako with a happy smile. For a whole year she had waited to see again all these beautiful dolls, for these were the special dolls which were used only on the day of the Doll Festival, when every little Japanese girl had a holiday.

Later the boys would have their holiday, when queer paper fishes would fly from tall poles and the boys would fly kites and have kite races.

"We now greet the three coolie dolls," said Hanako as she placed them on the fourth step. They were dressed in plainer clothes and carried brooms and brushes to show that they did the household work. Then came a little platform holding some doll actors who were giving a play.

At dinner time there was company and Mrs. Tanako's little maid servant heaped trays with good things to put before the guests. There were hot soups which every one drank, and blue and white bowls full of rice. There was golden brown fish served with preserved apricots, green chrysanthemum leaves in yellow batter, and bamboo shoots and mushrooms dipped in custard, and of course every one used chopsticks.

After dinner Hanako went visiting other little girls all up and down the street, and she carried gifts for them in her kimono sleeves.

"Alas, the smiling sun is going far away," said Hanako, as the third day of March ended. "The most beautiful dolls must go again into the big chest. Of all Doll Festivals this has been best." She cuddled down into her quilts.

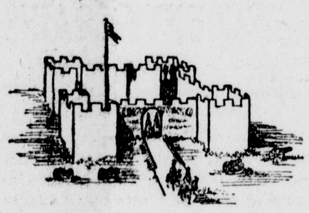

How to Build Your Fortress

1. A soft wood box about 19 inches by 13 inches is used for the main part, and a similar one is cut up for the turrets at the four corners.

2. Tools you will need are: a coping saw, chisels, a small cross-cut saw, plane, hammer, assorted nails, sharp knife, a pencil and ruler.

3. Pieces are cut in the parapet with coping saw and knife and are 1 inch long and ¾ inch high.

4. The platforms inside turrets, for soldiers to stand on, are 2 inches down from the top. Small ladders can reach from the floor to platforms.

5. Two doors, each 2 inches wide by 4 inches high, are placed on hinges and open inward.

6. The drawbridge can be made of several pieces of wood called slats, and can have small chains (obtained at ten-cent stores) to raise and lower it.

7. The fortress should be painted a gray color.

TABLE TALK

"Dear me!" exclaimed the cup to the saucer, "Did you see that child nick me with her spoon last evening? It makes me feel uncomfortable."

"Yes," answered the saucer, "I know just how you feel. Why yesterday that same child dropped ME! Such carelessness! Why can't people realize that we lose our beauty when we are nicked or cracked?"

"Oh, but Mr. China Cup and Miss Saucer, did you notice how dirty Jack's hands were at lunch today? He hid them in his lap most of the time so his mother wouldn't see them. Why, I would lose the pretty flowers with which I am decorated before I would come to the table as dirty as that!" contributed the plate.

"Ump," scolded the silver knife in indignant tones, "I have never been so mortified in my life as yesterday when Harry actually carried a piece of meat to his mouth with me and put me IN! Can you imagine such rudeness?"

"Well, you are not the only ones who have trouble with these careless humans," spoke the apple, which with the oranges and nuts, filled the bowl

in the center of the table. "Jane was told by her mother to wash me clean before I was put in here for eating and all she did was to hold me under the faucet for a minute. Just as though that would clean me! Why I need a good scrubbing before I am fit to eat. If only those children could see all the people who handle me before I am delivered at their door, they would surely be more careful. One day last week Jack took a brother apple to school. He threw it away before it was half eaten. Such wastefulness! I wonder if he knew that many boys and girls would have been glad to have had an apple to eat? What have you to say about how you are treated, Mr. Orange?"

"I have a great deal," answered the orange in an injured tone. "Boys and girls never can remember to throw my peelings in a garbage can. They drop them on the sidewalks and lawn. Then grown-ups talk about how horrid orange peelings look! Of course they do, when thrown about any place."

"You aren't any more abused than I am," pouted the bowl of cereal. "From the fuss boys and girls make about eating me, anyone would think my taste unpleasant. It isn't, and I am one of the best foods they can eat if they ever expect to grow up strong and well. Then mothers cook me so nicely, too."

The dish of dessert had been waiting all this time to tell her troubles. She now had a chance. "I do become so tired of having children skip their good meat, potatoes and vegetables just to satisfy their sweet tooth. I know I taste good to them, but I can't do them as much good as the other more important foods. Oh, here they come now!"

And all the table folk became silent immediately—hoping that the children, this time at least, would spare their injured feelings.

The Drawing Lesson

The Daisy

What funny thing is this I see?
A little turtle it MIGHT be;
Oh, no, it is a daisy flower—
But what can make her look so "sour?"

And so I ask her, "Why so sad?
A daisy should look gay and glad."

She says: "I'll whisper in your ear,
A fallen petal is a tear;

"I weep because I soon must die,
And that's enough to make me cry."
"Oh, yes," I say, "but while you live
A smile much happiness would give."

So now she smiles a smile at me,
And turns her sweet face UP, you see,
A daisy really should be gay,
Though she can live but one short day.

Test of Music

"There is only one critical judgment I can rely upon in music—the verdict of the spine," Fritz Kreisler told me. "If I feel a thrill down my spine, from my own work or that of any other man, I know that it is good. Let the critics say what they will. There is no finer test. And if an artist never knows that thrill, or loses it, he is in the wrong business."—Beverly Smith in the American Magazine.

Hair Turning White

There appear to be a number of well-authenticated cases on record in which the hair has turned gray within a few hours as the result of sickness, fright, or distress. The case of John M. Driver, clergyman, writer and lecturer, is pointed out as a good example. Driver many times stated from the public platform that his hair turned gray in a single night as the result of a domestic tragedy.
